Farm Aid Bill Passes Tests, Waits Vote in House Today

Measure Weathers Two Attacks; Passage Is Assured.

Rayburn Predicts Margin of 50-100

Dairy Bloc Joins G. O. P. Fight But Laborites Stay in Clear.

By Robert C. Albright.

House approval today of the conference report on the Administration's complex crop control program appeared assured last night as the Democratic leadership successfully weathered two important test votes and ordered a final showdown this afternoon.

Majority Leader Sam Rayburn forecast approval by more than a "50 to 100" vote margin, and some of his lieutenants placed their estimates higher. Passage today would lay the controversial farm legislation before the Senate for final action tomorrow.

Dairy bloc interests and virtually the entire Republican minority fought the conference agreement through five hours of limited debate, but retaliatory action by Laborites, still smarting from wage-hour bill recommittal, failed to develop.

Leadership Functions.

Despite Republican charges of "gag," the House by a 186-to-98 standing vote agreed to a four-hour debate limit in a rule waiving all points of order against the bill. Earlier, members refused to extend debate on the rules and ordered the "previous question" by a 250-to-140 roll call ballot.

Before recess at 5:30 p. m., a smoothly functioning leadership machine carried the Administration's No. 1 farm measure nearly to the point of passage. Approval by the House today and the Senate later this week would send to the President's desk a program more far reaching than the invalidated agricultural adjustment act.

The report continues soil conservation benefits and adds control machinery for five major crops, cotton, corn, wheat, tobacco and rice. Marketing quotas are provided, on approval of farmers, when production passes surplus points. Parity payments are assured farmers, "if and when" funds are available. And a start is provided on Government crop insurance, beginning with wheat.

Farm Groups Split.

Farm organizations again split sharply on the proposed legislation on the eve of the final House vote. Fred Brenckman, Washington representative of the National Grange, protested in letters to members against hasty action and asked that the bill "be stripped of its compulsory features." But the American Farm Bureau Federation supported immediate passage.

"We recognize the earnest effort of the conference committee to compose the many divergent viewpoints," said the Federation's executive committee in letters to members. "We anticipate that revisions will be required and we doubt that funds authorized to be appropriated are sufficient to fully achieve the objectives of the measure.

"However, it is our belief that this bill if enacted into law will provide for a program that will attract the maximum voluntary sup-

Capone Goes Berserk, Put in 'Rock' Hospital

Believed Insane, He Is Placed Under Care of Psychiatrist.

The Department of Justice yesterday disclosed that Al Capone, kingpin of racketeers in the prohibition era, was a hospital patient at Alcatraz penitentiary but withheld confirmation of reports he had become insane.

Capone has been in the infirmary on "The Rock" since Saturday, a Justice official said, but to date there is no definite diagnosis of his illness.

The San Francisco News yesterday said he was suffering from paresis, a common disease of the central nervous system usually of syphilitic origin, and lives in alternate periods of melancholia and high glee.

Spurred into action by the news "leak" on the gangster's illness, the Bureau of Prisons called Warden James Johnston by long-distance telephone and from him obtained the details.

Capone is being treated by the prison physician and a consulting psychiatrist from San Francisco, across the bay from the penal fortress, it was announced. There is no intention of transferring him in the near future, it was stated.

If Capone's condition warrants, he will be moved to the Federal institution for defective delinquents

Crime Blamed On Competitive Scale of Living

'Keeping Up With Joneses' Called Major Factor in Problem.

Dr. Leverett S. Lyon, executive vice president of the Brookings Institution, last night said that "keeping up with the Joneses" was a major factor in the crime problem.

Dr. Lyon, speaking at the crime forum in the Wardman Park Hotel, listed the "competitive standard of living," along with actual need, as important economic factors leading the individual to crime.

Behind both forces, he said, is the underlying problem of scarcity of economic goods.

"Crime has existed under every form of economic organization from earliest times," he said. "Despite the Marxist doctrine that crime is inherent in capitalism, there has been an increase of crime in Russia since capitalism was abolished."

H suggested that a steady, although moderate, rse in the general standard of living would lead to reduction of crime.

"For most people, the most intense desires are directed to those goods which are just above their reach," he declared. "If society could make a consistent advance in living standards, the most impelling desires would be filled, even though the improvement might not be very great."

Dr. Lyon charged crowded housing was a breeding place for crime. In poverty stricken areas, he pointed out, the family frequently is broken up by economic pressure, home influence destroyed and the growing child is brought into close contact with criminals.

"It is easy for criminals to win converts in the slums," he said.

O'Brien Guilty Of Perjury in Gang Shooting

Youth Testifies Brother of Warring Paid $3,500 for Silence.

Joseph E. O'Brien, last of a trio who "forgot to remember" details of how a group of men attacked him and crippled him with a bullet through the knee two years ago, was found guilty of perjury in District Court yesterday.

The verdict was returned only a few weeks after the other two men, William R. (Country) Carpenter and Harry (Spike) Behrle, had been found guilty of similar charges. The trio probably will be called before Justice Jesse C. Adkins for sentence Friday.

$3,500 For Silence.

In the O'Brien trial yesterday a youthful gasoline station attendant, Burt J. Watson, caused a sensation when he asserted Emmett Warring, a brother of Charles Warring, gangster, had given O'Brien $3,500 to "keep quiet" about the affair. Watson asserted, upon examination, that while he, O'Brien and another man sat in an automobile in November, 1937, O'Brien remarked he had gotten "about" $3,500 from Emmett Warring to "keep quiet."

Watson gave his version of the incident only after he had been shown a copy of a purported statement he had made after the conversation in the car. His statement added that he believed Carpenter and Behrle got some of the money.

The three men had been called as Government witnesses in a prosecution of Charles Warring and his associates and were indicted when they proved to have poor memories.

Warring Gang in Prison.

A wall of silence was thrown up around the attempt of a group of six men to wipe out O'Brien when the men charged with shooting him appeared for trial. Behrle, Carpenter and O'Brien, prosecution witnesses, were vague in their recollections of what took place on an afternoon in July, 1936, when, near Second and C streets southeast, they were pounced upon.

Cross-examination of the three failed to shake them in their hazy recollections.

O'Brien was shot, according to records in District Court, by Charles R. (Rags) Warring and five others, allegedly in reprisal for the hijacking of an automobile loaded with liquor. "Rags" Warring and his colleagues were convicted of assault with a dangerous weapon and now are in prison.

Business Aids Are Mapped By Roosevelt

Loans for 'Little Man,' Large-Scale Housing Projects Studied.

Stimulation of Labor, Production Increase Aim of Programs.

By Franklyn Waltman.

President Roosevelt and several of his advisers are busily engaged, it was learned yesterday, in devising two programs of Federal financial aid to private enterprise to stimulate employment of labor and to increase industrial production.

Details remain to be worked out, but a definite Administration decision has been reached, it was reported, to use Government funds, at least in the beginning, to supply industrial loans for plant expansion to "little business" and to establish a national mortgage association to finance large-scale housing projects.

In each instance, the President and his advisers have been prompted to take some action which would serve to encourage private enterprise to provide new mechanisms of finance to take the place of instruments which formerly served little business and the construction industry, but which are no longer available.

In the case of industrial loans to "little business," the plan is to fill the void in financing capital expansion created by the operation of the undistributed profits tax, the securities and exchange commission act and the prohibition against banks underwriting securities issues.

The proposed national mortgage associations are designed to play the part in financing large housing projects that the mortgage guarantee companies and similar institutions played prior to the depression. In neither instance, however, does the President want to put the Government permanently in the business of lending money, nor does he want, even in the beginning, to have the Treasury advance any substantial amount of funds.

Private Capital Sought.

Mr. Roosevelt, in his housing message to Congress in November, forecast the use of Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds for the establishment of one or more national mortgage associations to provide financing for the large-scale rental housing program contemplated under the terms of the housing legislation just enacted. He said he had asked the RFC to earmark $50,000,000 for that purpose.

Whether the initial contribution of the RFC to the establishment of a national mortgage association, formed under the Federal Housing Administration act, should be that large has not yet been determined. RFC Chairman Jesse Jones, FHA Administrator Stewart MacDonald, the President and others have conferred on that point in the last few days, as well as over the possibilities of getting private capital to join with the RFC in setting up the

Stand Aligns Labor and Industry on Way to End Slump.

Executive Council Keys Program to Relief and Wages.

By the United Press.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 8.—The American Federation of Labor tonight called upon Congress to give business a helping hand by repeal or modification of the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes.

The suggestion was made in a formal statement by the federation executive council which wound up a 16-day meeting here today.

Request for tax reform comprised the salient feature of a four-point industrial recovery program offered as a means for lifting the country from depression. In addition, the council asked:

1. Adequate Federal relief funds to support the increasing number of unemployed.

2. Maintenance of the present wage structure without reductions.

3. Creation and maintenance of work opportunities for working men and women in private industry.

Proposals Are "Specific."

In publishing the council's recommendations, the A. F. L. president, William Green, said:

"We are indulging in something more than generalities. We have made specific recommendations to start business going and develop real co-operation between the three forces of Government, industry and labor."

Request for tax amendments aligned the Federation's ruling body with the majority of business organizations which have been pestering Congress for easement of the present revenue load.

"The executive council makes this suggestion in the interests of labor," it said. "It firmly believes that all must pull together—labor, industry and the Government—in order to break down and overcome a most serious and threatening unemployment situation.

Parallels C. I. O. Position.

"The needs of the unemployed, the creation of work opportunities for all who are able and willing to work, are of supreme importance to the executive council.

"Even though industry may complain because of curtailed earnings, labor suffers most because of hunger and distress resulting from unemployment."

The Federation's position, as outlined by the council after three hours' discussion of the economic situation, closely parallels that taken by the Committee for Industrial Organization, upon which the council declared war yesterday by expelling three rebel unions.

Roosevelt, Hull Deny Wartime Agreements With Other Countries

Secretary's Views Are Substantially Own, Says Roosevelt.

Senate Receives Answer in Quiet

Battleships Are Upheld as Best Defense by Adm. Leahy.

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt yesterday approved the statement of Secretary of State Cordell Hull that the United States had no foreign alliances, agreements or understandings with any other nations which related to war or the possibility of war.

Hull earlier had written the Senate a brief note "very definitely" stating "No" as his answer to three pointed inquiries as to American foreign policy made Monday in a resolution introduced by Senator Hiram W. Johnson (Republican), of California.

The President, at his late afternoon press conference, said Hull's views substantially were his own.

The Demands Answered.

Johnson had demanded the Administration disclose whether it had any alliances or understandings with Great Britain relating to war; whether there existed any understandings or agreements for use of the Navy in conjunction with other nations, and whether there were any agreements with any nations that the Navy should police or patrol any particular oceans.

Hull said "no" to each point.

Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, read Hull's letter to an unusually quiet Senate, and suggested that Johnson withdraw his resolution. Johnson refused, but expressed satisfaction that his request had been answered, adding that he hoped a precedent for the exchange of vital information had been established.

In obvious relief, Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, stated his pleasure that the situation had been cleared.

Battleships "Vulnerable."

Developments continued to pace the intense interest in foreign affairs, including:

Admission by Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, that battleships are "not invulnerable" and can be sunk by torpedoes, armor-piercing shells or aerial bombs, although he upheld the traditional Navy view that warships are indispensable as powerful defense weapons.

State Department statistics revealing that Argentina bought $2,462,003.40 worth of war materials, chiefly airplanes, from the United States last month—more than twice as much as Japan and China together purchased.

Introduction in the House by Representative Hamilton Fish, jr. (Republican), of New York, of a resolution asking the President to inform the House whether reports of a diplomatic break between China and Japan were true.

Naval changes in command, retiring the commanders, Capt. Leigh Noyes and Capt. J. H. Powers, of the Navy's two largest vessels—the 33,000-ton aircraft carriers Lexington and Saratoga, and the appointment of Commander J. T. Alexander as Governor of Guam and commander of the Guam Naval Station.

Pastor Ousts His Attorneys At Nazi Trial

Niemoeller Discharges Aides; Will Conduct Own Defense.

Accused Minister Clashes With Judges at Sedition Hearing.

By the United Press.

Berlin, Feb. 8.—The Rev. Martin Niemoeller, as defiant as he was in World War times when he raided the seas as a German U-boat commander, today fired his three lawyers and took over his own defense against charges of sedition before a secret Nazi court.

The 46-year-old pastor, clamped in jail last July 1 for his militant leadership of the Confessional Synod of the Lutheran Church in opposing "Nazification" of traditional German Christianity, refused the offer of the three secret judges to pick new lawyers for him.

The pastor then clashed in a sharp verbal duel with the judges, demanding to know why German newspapers were permitted to refer to him as a "traitor."

"It will be appropriate to discuss that point later," the chief judge said finally, and asked Niemoeller why he fired his attorneys.

"In religious matters," the accused pastor replied, "I know more than all three of them together."

Niemoller broke with his counsel because they refused to demand again that his trial be thrown open to the public, in defiance of a ruling made by the court when the trial opened yesterday.

The lawyers sought to calm his demands by pointing out that he had no chance of obtaining a hearing open to the public and newspapermen and that to continue his insistence might only serve to anger the judges and harm his chances.

The pastor, whose followers are under "quarantine" of the secret police, but who openly assert the secret trial constitutes a persecution comparable to that of Martin Luther before the Diet of Worms 400 years ago, shouted yesterday he wanted to prove before everyone that "I am no traitor!"

Most of today's session was devoted to hearing the State's witnesses, however, and Niemoeller had little to do in his new role of defendant-lawyer.

The fact that the government is aware of the pastor's wide popular-

3 Nations Join To Rescue 4 on Drifting Ice

Norway and Denmark Will Aid Soviet Attempts to Save Scientists.

By the United Press.

Moscow, Feb. 8. — Three nations joined tonight in a vast effort to reach four Russian scientists, adrift on the ice in the storm-swept Arctic Sea, and save them from the fate of 13 of their would-be rescuers who were killed when Russia's biggest dirigible crashed.

The Norwegian and Danish governments, learning of the tragedy of the dirigible USSR-V6 which hit a mountain while en route to the Russian port of Murmansk on the Arctic coast, arranged to set up 10 observation stations along 250 miles of the eastern Greenland coast off whch the marooned scientists are drifting. It was impossible, because of storm conditions and shattered ice, to send dog teams from northeast Finland to search for the men.

The marooned scientists, who since last May 21 have drifted more than 1,100 miles southward from the North Pole where they set up camp after a mass airplane landing under direction of Prof. Otto J. Schmidt, were reported tonight to be between Greenland and Jan Nayen Island.

Two rescue ships have been sent through the churning fields of ice, but the one nearest to them, the ice-breaker Murmanetz, was 300 miles away to the south and the other, the ice-breaker Taymir carrying a dog team, supplies and two airplanes, was 650 miles due east.

The crash of the dirigible USSR-V-6, which was on a trial flight preparing to dash to the rescue when it crashed in fog only 177 miles south of Murmansk, its destination, took the lives of 13 of a crew of 18.

President Hints He'll Ask Huge Fund for Relief

By the Associated Press.

The Roosevelt Administration soon may ask Congress for hundreds of millions more for relief, it was indicated last night.

The President told reporters shortly after conferring with a group of mid-West mayors and Government officials he was studying appeals for additional appropriations and probably would make an announcement within a few days.

He was approaching the question, Mr. Roosevelt said, from the standpoint of human needs, and asserted the method of spending would be decided after it was determined how much money was needed.

WPA Saxophonist Held as Killer of Woman at Party

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—William King, 34, WPA saxophonist who claimed he woke up in Mrs. Harriet Brown Neilson's apartment this morning and found her nude body at his feet, was charged with killing her tonight.

Mrs. Neilson, former national diving champion and daughter of a prominent California family, apparently was killed by a blow in a party in her apartment. The place was littered with empty whisky bottles.

King told police Mrs. Neilson hit him with a bottle and he slapped her and that he could not remember any more.

War Peril Greater Now Than in 1914, Says Soviet Envoy

Chapel Hill, N. C., Feb. 8 (AP).—Alexander Antonovich Troyanovsky, Russian ambassador to the United States, told a University of North Carolina audience tonight that "there is more danger of a war at the present time than there was in the days preceding the World War."

Emphasizing this point, Troyanovsky said "Germany was not in alliance with Japan at that time."

The only way out, he said, is for "Great Britain, the United States and the Soviet Union to form an alliance. Japan is not apt to exhaust herself financially, as some people think.

Roosevelt Hints He May Enter Kennedy-Perkins Marine Row

By Edward T. Folliard

President Roosevelt is about to take a hand in the battle over labor legislation for the unsettled American maritime industry, it was indicated yesterday.

The President said at his press conference that he planned to talk to Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy, of the United States Maritime Commission, and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins when they return to the city. Kennedy is in Florida and Miss Perkins is in Louisiana.

On the question of having maritime labor disputes handled by a mediation board, as are railroad labor disputes, Kennedy and Miss Perkins are far apart. Kennedy has recommended the mediation plan to Congress. He has emphasized that legislation to assure peace and discipline in the shipping industry is essential; that it would be "futile" to spend millions of the taxpayers' dollars on new ships without such legislation.

Miss Perkins, on the other hand, has expressed the opinion that the maritime industry is not "ripe" for mediation machinery. That also is

D. C. Boy, 14, Killed by Friend Cleaning Gun at Md. School

William L. Davies, 14, son of a prominent Washington family, died in Emergency Hospital last night from a bullet wound accidentally inflicted by a classmate at Charlotte Hall School.

The lad died six hours after he had been rushed to the hospital from the Maryland military academy. He was shot, Maryland State police say, by a 15-year-old friend whom he was visiting in the school at the time.

Officer W. H. Eskite, of the Maryland State police, said the schoolmate explained that he was cleaning the weapon, a .32-caliber gun, when it discharged. The bullet drilled into the Davies' boy's abdomen.

Col. B. F. Crowson, headmaster of the school, called an ambulance and obtained an escort of Maryland State and Washington police.

Officer Eskite, who rode in with the boy, later declared:

"He was game all the way in. He took it like a man."

Davies was the son of Frank W. Davies, manager of the University Club, and Mrs. Virginia Davies, of 1915 I street northwest.

Bulkley Rushes Superhighway Plan's Drafts

9 Transcontinental Roads Are Proposed by Ohio Democrats.

Drawing renewed encouragement last night from the press-conference statement of President Roosevelt that he did not oppose self-liquidating projects, such as highways, Senator J. Bulkley (Democrat), of Ohio, rushed drafts of his superhighway bill for early introduction.

Bulkley's proposal, which will call for expenditure of from six to eight billion dollars for construction of three East-West and six North-South transcontinental superhighways, is based on a self-liquidating program.

Draws Hearty Support.

Although the Bulkley measure has not been introduced, it drew hearty support from Senator F. Ryan Duffy (Democrat), of Wisconsin, who lauded the plan yesterday as "not only of practical value from the standpoints of progress and national defense, but of inestimable worth in increasing employment and in giving much needed support to the capital goods industries."

Bulkley saw President Roosevelt last week on his proposed measure and reported then that he was "greatly encouraged."

Magnuson Presses Plan.

Meanwhile, Representative Magnuson (Democrat), Washington said yesterday Admiral Leahy's testimony before the House Naval Affairs Committee supplied aditional evidence of the importance of his proposed Seattle-Alaska highway.

Magnuson asked Admiral Leahy, if such a highway were built, whether it would not be of great value in time of war.

"It certainly would be of inestimable value to both the Army and Navy," replied the admiral, "if we would be permitted to use that part of it which would run through Canada."

Woman Solves Chinese Code to Nip Opium Ring

By the Associated Press.

Mrs. Elizabeth Smith Friedman, Coast Guard cryptanalyst, returned to Washington yesterday with the story of how the solution of a Chinese code broke up a gigantic opium smuggling ring.

Mrs. Friedman, who was loaned by the United States to the Canadian government, was a key witness at a trial in which five Vancouver (B. C.) Chinese were convicted January 24 of trading guns and ammunition for opium.

Her job was to turn such messages as "Uuooa masan aguso gukuu iuuia ely" into "Cable three thousand. Select fully the order list of Wat Sang."

She declined, for professional reasons, to say how this was done, although she admitted the message was a code of Chinese words and that she did not know Chinese. After she solved the code a Chinese interpreter helped translate the message.

Mrs. Friedman has been the cryptanalyst since 1924 and handles deciphering work for all agencies of the Treasury. During prohibition days, she sometimes had hundreds of rum-runners' code messages to solve.

Court Broadcasts Offered by N. B. C.

A radio program devoted to cases on trial in Police Court and designed to promote traffic safety was offered to Washington yesterday by the National Broadcasting Co.

In line with a recent proposal by Representative William Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, chairman of a House traffic subcommittee, Kenneth H. Berkeley, general manager of stations WRC and WMAL, agreed to broadcast actual traffic cases in court.

"In an effort to assist the traffic subcommittee and make Washington traffic safety conscious," said Berkeley, "the National Broadcasting Co. will broadcast 15 minutes each day from Traffic Court."

Schulte said he would communicate the offer to the judges of Police Court for their action. Previous efforts to enter Police Court with radio equipment have been balked by the judges.

Working for Washington

Typographical Union Head Recalled to Post After 50 Years

J. B. DICKMAN.

Dickman First Served as President of Organization in 1887; Has Worked Untiringly for City's Betterment All His Life.

By Christine Sadler

Only to the Roman named Cincinnatus—and a few other leaders down through the centuries—have come the distinction of being called back into service many years after retirement. J. B. Dickman, 78-year-old president of the Columbia Typographical Union, is one of them.

Dickman was made president of the union in 1887 and drafted back to the same job in 1937, although he at that time had been retired from his job with the Government Printing Office since 1924.

Members of the union are sponsoring a dinner in honor of his "golden jubilee" as their chief executive, to be given at the Willard Hotel February 26. They will not lack for material from which to make speeches in his honor. The half century between his first and second terms were filled with accomplishments which mark the veteran as one of the outstanding civic, fraternal, and welfare leaders of Washington.

Playground Enthusiast.

For instance: He helped get the public playgrounds movement started in Washington. He is one of the two living members of the group which conceived the idea of supplying the children of Washington with free textbooks. He is a former president of the North Cleveland Park Citizens Association, which his son, J. B. Dickman, jr., now heads.

As a member of the Typographical Union his work has been on a Nation-wide front. In 1936, when a delegate to the international meeting, he introduced the resolution asking that an endowment fund be started for the Printers Home at Colorado Springs—in order that all sick and aged members of the organization might be assured the treatment and care they needed. This endowment fund is growing rapidly and is one of his principal interests at this time.

Dickman is also deeply interested in the movement of his union to solve its unemployment relief problem. "We believe in solving such problems within our own organization," he said. Connected with this movement is the fight which his group is making against installation of viragraphs and multigraphs in the patent section of the Government Printing Office. Not only would the quality of work done there be lowered by substituting these for printers, but a large number of printers would thereby be thrown out of work, he declared.

Members of his union give him credit for clearing the mortgage from the building in which they have their offices and meetings and, as an indication of his foresight, point out that in 1886 he voted against merger of the federation with the Knights of Labor.

Characteristics of the veteran which are most noticeable to those outside the union are his kindliness, clear thinking and forbearance. The last-named quality is especially evident in his understanding of youth and his conviction that "we must all learn our own lessons."

Born in Dayton, Ohio.

"I do not think that just because a person reaches my age he has any right to give advice. Human nature never changes and youth never has learned much from age. I doubt that it ever will," he declared.

Dickman was born in Dayton, Ohio, in 1859 and came to Washington to work as a printer with the Government Printing Office in 1880. From 1906 to 1924 he was proofreader for the office. He is a brother of the late Maj. Gen. Joseph B. Dickman, who was the first commander of the American Army of Occupation to go into Germany after the World War, and has much of his commanding appearance. He makes his home with his only son, at 3628 Veazey street northwest.

On Friday—A. J. Driscoll, president of the Mid City Citizens Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

the argument of the Committee for Industrial Organization, which is lobbying against the bill.

This being an election year, a great many members of Congress would like to know where the President stands on the issue, with Kennedy or with Miss Perkins. Well-posted members of the House say that unless the mediation bill bears the indorsement of Mr. Roosevelt it never will be passed on their side of the Capitol.

Chairman Copeland, of the Senate Commerce Committee, yesterday introduced a resolution calling for an investigation of "insubordination and general lack of discipline on American vessels." A special committee of five Senators would be appointed and allowed $50,000 for expenses.

Kennedy Is Quoted.

In the preamble of his resolution, Copeland quoted Kennedy as saying that "A merchant marine built upon inadequate and unsatisfactory personnel is little better than no merchant marine at all."

He also called attention to the testimony given at the Capitol by Admiral Leahy, chief of naval operations, as to the need of merchant ships as auxiliaries to the Navy.

Since they began hearings on labor legislation for the merchant marine, the Senate Commerce and Labor committees have heard testimony indicating that Communists hold key positions in at least one of the big maritime unions.

Joseph P. Ryan, head of the International Longshoremen's Association (A. F. of L.) is scheduled to appear before the committees at a resumption of hearings this morning. In New York he charged that the Communist Party was financing the activities of Harry Bridges, leader of the West Coast longshoremen and a newly-appointed C. I. O. representative.

The C. I. O., in statements denouncing the proposed mediation legislation, has charged that it would mean "compulsory arbitration" and would rob seamen of the right to strike.

John P. Devaney, president of the National Lawyers Guild and a well-known liberal, has counseled maritime union leaders that they should have no fear of a mediation system.

Belittles Union Fears.

In an interview on the West Coast, he said:

"I think the fear of a maritime mediation system comes from a misunderstanding of the railway labor mediation plan. It does not take away the workers' right to strike.

"The railway labor act gives more than 1,000,000 workers five separate methods and four vehicles for reaching peaceful settlements of their demands. They may negotiate; they may resort to mediation through the National Mediation Board; they may go to arbitration, and they may go to the National Adjustment Board. Then if all that fails the President may appoint an emergency board to seek a settlement.

"But arbitration is not compulsory. It is terribly unfortunate that labor leaders mistrust the plan because of the fear that Government will compel the unions to do certain things. Railway unions have not lost the right to strike. Nor would maritime unions lose the right to take militant action if it were necessary. But by bringing labor and employer together not once but five times, the unions find that they can obtain their objectives peacefully."

Three Virginians Named To U. S. Military Academy

By the Associated Press.

Senators Toss 'Compliments' In Lynch Battle

Southern Filibuster Against Bill Rolls Into Second Month..

Gentlemen from the North paid their compliments to gentlemen from the South, and vice versa, in the Senate yesterday, as the filibuster against the anti-lynching bill steamed into its second month.

"Northern Senators are using the race question to stir up strife," asserted Senator John H. Bankhead 2d (Democrat), Alabama, brother of the House Speaker.

"The intelligent colored people of the South don't want to be used in politics."

Senator Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, had just charged Southern Senators "do not represent the progressive and enlightened sentiment of the progressive and enlightened people of the Southland."

Filibustering Friends.

Guffey referred to the anti-lynching bill opponents as "my filibustering friends of the South."

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, floor manager of the opposition, interposed that Northern friends of the bill 'skedaddled" out of the chamber when Southerners were presenting their arguments.

Blocking a vote on the anti-lynching bill, Southern Senators have been holding the floor until the farm bill conference report can arrive from the House to temporarily displace the Wagner-Van Nuys measure. After action on the farm conference report, they plan another effort to permanently lay aside anti-lynching for pending Administration appropriation bills.

Yesterday, Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, yielded the floor to Senator Bankhead. Before recess, Senator Allen J. Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, who recently spoke more than five hours straight, claimed the floor again.

Reads Long List.

Meantime, Guffey claimed recognition briefly to read a long list of Southern organizations and newspapers which he said favor steps to stop the lynching evil.

Bankhead said Guffey would be "lined up with any program that promised on the surface to be an appeal to the colored race" and mentioned reports that Guffey might run for the Pennsylvania Governorship.

Bankhead said both Connally and himself opposed the Ku Klux Klan when it was at its peak and when some of the Senators now supporting the anti-lynching bill were "as quiet as graveyards."

The Alabaman charged the bill "violates the constitutional rule of State soverignty" and invades the police powers of the States.

Steel Farm Home Exhibit Opens at Greenbelt Friday

The permanence of the frame farmhouse and the old red barn was threatened yesterday when the Farm Security Administration announced that a group of all-steel, prefabricated farm buildings has been erected near the Government housing project at Greenbelt.

It is estimated that the group can be delivered unassembled for $2,000.

Sixty-Three Per Cent of Voters in New Survey Still Favor Economy Over Pump-Priming.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Feb. 9.—Today the Public Works Administration will begin pouring out nearly a hundred million dollars in a municipal power plant building program which, according to PWA estimates, will create more than 500,000,000 man-hours of work and will, in effect, help to prime the business pump.

GEORGE GALLUP.

The PWA grants add fresh fuel to the controversy now being waged in Washington over the issue: should the Federal Government increase spending in order to pull business out of the slump?

Federal Reserve Chairman Eccles declares that if business does not spend, the Government will have to. But the Washington conference of "little" businessmen favored curtailment of Government spending because the present rate "is greater than the ability of the people to meet." The President's Business Advisory Council has flatly stated that pump priming at this time would "seriously interfere" with the resumption of a "sound" recovery.

The American Institute of Public Opinion has taken the controversy directly to the voters of the country in a Nation-wide sampling referendum. With all population groups contributing money to the Federal coffers, either directly or indirectly, the institute asked persons in all levels:

"Do you think Government spending should be increased to help get business out of its present slump?"

A substantial majority say "no." The actual vote is 37 per cent for Government spending, 63 per cent opposed.

An analysis of the comments from voters indicates that the majority oppose Government spending for two main reasons.

First they say that a business recovery induced by that method would be artificial and impermanent. "We tried spending before," runs one typical comment, "and when it eased up we had another slump." Another voter declared: "That kind of prosperity doesn't last."

A second reason advanced by the majority is that the tax burden must not be increased. "More taxes," declared one voter, a housewife, "will only postpone the prosperity we want."

Trend Is Stable.

Political observers anticipate that, as the recession deepens, a move for pump priming will gather force in Congress, particularly since prosperity is an important factor in an election year.

But the institute's studies indicate that the continuance of the slump, even though it may affect Congressional sentiment, has not materially changed the public's attitude toward pump priming. There is no more sentiment for increased Government spending today than there was in an institute poll on the same subject last December, when 62 per cent voted against spending, 38 per cent in favor.

Intensity Measured.

The institute's latest survey found that voters who oppose Government spending are not only numerically in a majority, but also that they feel more intensely about the subject than those who favor spending. The institute's field reporters, who conducted the poll, found that only a small proportion of persons favoring Government spending were emphatic in their opinions. A large majority of the "no" voters, on the other hand, expressed emphatic views.

Federal Courts Undermanned and Overworked, Cummings Tells Senate Committee.

Delay in the administration of justice because Federal courts are undermanned and overworked has become the outstanding defect in our judicial system, Attorney General Cummings told a Senate Judiciary sub-committee yesterday. The Attorney General said the Federal courts were 50,000 cases behind in their work and had no prospect of catching up unless more judges were appointed.

The Ashurst-Hatch bill which Cummings advocated would add 4 circuit judges and 23 lower court judges to the Federal bench. The District of Columbia would get four more judges—an associate justice of the Court of Appeals and three District Court judges.

Court Hears 2 Defend Holding Company Law

Jackson and Cohen Say Measure Aims to Remove Vices.

By the Associated Press.

A Government spokesman argued yesterday before the Supreme Court that the 1935 act regulating public utility holding companies was a constitutional effort to "bring about a higher rule of financial morality."

Robert H. Jackson, Assistant Attorney General, added that the legislation was intended "to remedy the conduct of holding company systems and to remove the vices they had introduced."

He was joined in defending the measure by Benjamin V. Cohen, one of President Roosevelt's advisers who was making his debut before the high tribunal.

Cohen, who spoke only a few minutes, will resume at noon today. He assisted in drafting the legislation which is under attack by the Electric Bond & Share Co. and 26 subsidiaries

Before the Government attorneys presented their views, Thomas D. Thacher, counsel for the company, had asserted the entire act was an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority and violated State rights.

In the four hours of argument, the seven justices sitting in the case asked only three perfunctory questions.

Spectators who packed the courtroom included Secretary Ickes, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, one of the authors of the legislation; Jerome Frank, a member of the Securities Commission, and Thomas G. Corcoran, another Roosevelt adviser who aided in drafting the measure.

The appeal involved 1934 and 1935 income and estate taxes, and included technical deductions, some of them based on division of property with his former wives, Virginia Bruce and Ina Claire.

Gilbert reported 1934 salary of $19,791 and no 1935 salary. He had income, however, from rents and securities.

Nippon Armies Moving to Trap 400,000 Foes

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Feb. 8.—Two Japanese columns advanced simultaneously today in what appeared to be a new strategy to close in on the western flank of 400,000 Chinese troops defending the important Lunghai Railway in North China.

The two columns, one moving from the southeast and the other from the northwest, were aimed toward Kweiteh, on the Lunghai 90 miles west of Suchow, main objective of the Japanese drive.

Should they reach Kweiteh, China's main armies would be cut off from the interior.

Tanks Lead Advance.

The new threat appeared when a Japanese column, facing determined opposition along the heavily fortified Tientsin-Pukow Railway north of Pengpu, was reported swinging to the west from Hwaiyuan and advancing along the Kwo River toward Kweiteh, 125 miles to the northwest.

Led by tanks, the Japanese were reported moving across the hitherto peaceful agricultural regions of northern Anhwei Province with the immediate objective Mengheng, 52 miles from Hwaiyuan.

The other column was said by Japanese dispatches to have launched a surprise offensive along the Peiping-Hankow Railway, 125 miles northwest of Kweiteh, and occupied the walled town of Nanlo. The fleeing Chinese left 1,000 dead, the dispatches said.

Heavy Fighting Reported.

Meanwhile, the Chinese reported heavy fighting at Wuhu, 60 miles up the Yangtze River from Nanking, and around Hangchow, southwest of Shanghai on the Chekiang Province coast.

They asserted they had recaptured Yuhang, west of Hangchow; Fuyang, 18 miles to the southwest, and three towns near Wuhu—Lukiang, Chussukiang and Fanshan.

Prince Nicolas, 66, Of Greece, Is Dead

Athens, Feb. 8 (AP).—Prince Nicolas, third son of King George I, uncle of the present ruler, George II, died shortly after noon today content that his long exile had ended. He was 66.

His last words were:

"I am happy to die in my beloved country."

After George II had been deposed in 1924, members of the royal family had been forbidden to live in Greece. The ruler, however, was restored to the throne in 1935.

Prince Nicolas' death, which followed a month's illness, occurred as the Duchess of Kent, one of his three daughters, and her husband were en route to his bedside from Munich.

German Helium Cargo Approved

By the Associated Press.

The State Department announced yesterday it had issued a license for the export of 2,600,000 cubic feet of helium to Germany, the first installment of an allotment of 17,900,000 cubic feet.

The gas is for the new German Zeppelin LZ-130, which is destined to start flying between Germany and the United States in June. Helium is being used to prevent a future explosion such as that of the Hindenburg last May 6.

Two American naval officers have the right to passage on the airship on each voyage to acquire experience in airship operation.

Capital's Share In Roads Sought

Although Washington motorists pay various types of automotive taxes totaling $2,200,000 annually, the District does not share in Federal-aid highway apportionments, George E. Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club, told the House Roads Committee yesterday.

The Capital, he said, is the only political subdivision within the United Sattes which does not participate in the apportionments of highway funds.

In urging the committee to include Washington in the Federal highway aid program, Keneipp pointed out that Government and State controlled highways connecting the North and South lead directly through the city.

'Scarface' Al Capone Reported Insane at Alcatraz Prison

3. At Alcatraz, Capone was deprived entirely of a life of ease and simply became a number. He was forgotten but is in the news again with the report he is suffering from paresis, a mental disease usually of syphilitic origin. The scars shown in this grim portrait reveal how Capone got his sobriquet.

Vessel Damaged in Bahamas to Relieve Raleigh as Flagship.

The light cruiser Omaha, now being overhauled at Norfolk Navy Yard, will replace the cruiser Raleigh in April as flagship of Special Squadron 40-T, operating temporarily in Spanish and Mediterranean waters, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

The department meanwhile was notified officially that Commander James T. Alexander had assumed office as governor of Guam and commandant of the Guam naval station, relieving Capt. Benjamin V. McCandlish, who has been ordered to command the new light cruiser Boise, under construction by the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co.

Officials also announced assignment of Capt. John H. Hoover, commanding officer of the Norfolk naval air station, as commander of the aircraft carrier Lexington, effective in May or June.

He will succeed Capt. Leigh Noyes. Neither Capt. Noyes' new assignment nor Capt. Hoover's successor at Norfolk has been announced. Capt. Hoover was executive officer of the Lexington from 1929 to 1931.

The Navy also recently assigned Capt. Albert C. Read, assistant chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, to command the aircraft carrier Saratoga. He will succeed Capt. John N. Towers, whose new assignment has not been made public. The change will take place in June, it was announced.

Repairs to the Omaha, damaged when she ran aground in the Bahamas last summer, will be completed February 25. The ship, now commanded by Capt. Wallace L. Lind, will make a training cruise to Guantanamo, Cuba, returning to Norfolk for fuel and supplies before departing on her new assignment April 15, officials explained.

The Navy Department announced that the new destroyer Warrington would be placed in commission today at the New York Navy Yard by Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward, commandant of the Third Naval District. The Warrington, tenth destroyer of the 1,850-ton class to be commissioned, will be commanded by Commander Leighton Wood.

The Department also said the 1,850-ton destroyer Somers, recently completed at Kearney, N. J., would sail from the New York Navy Yard Friday on her shakedown cruise under Commander James E. Maheris. She will visit Havana and gulf and south atlantic ports.

The 1,500-ton destroyer Mugford, built at the Boston Navy Yard, will start her shakedown cruise from Boston February 26, scheduled to visit San Juan, Puerto Rico and Havana under Lieut. Comdr. James W. Whitfield.

The destroyers Decatur, Badger, Tattnall, Jacob Jones, Fairfax, Dickerson and Schneck, which have been participating in training exercises off Culebra, Puerto Rico, will visit San Juan, Fort de France, Martinique and Bridgetown, Barbadoes, between February 18 and February 27.

Lightning Speed 10,000 Miles A Second, Movie Photos Show

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 8.—Measurement of the speed of lightning, at 10,000 miles a second, was reported to the American Institute of Electrical Engineers here today by Karl B. McEachron.

The speed was timed at the Empire State Building in the heart of New York City. This world's tallest building is struck oftener than any other known place on earth, McEachron said. It acts like a needle to draw electricity.

A motion picture camera, on top of a skyscraper half a mile from the Empire State, has caught every flash for three years. It is part of a lightning laboratory directed by McEachron for the General Electric Co.

New facts have been discovered. The most interesting, McEachron said, is that a tall building uses a tongue of fire to wheedle lightning. Frequently before lightning hits the Empire State a spindling flame leaps upward from the top of its 1,250-foot tower.

The flame does not go all the way to the clouds. It reaches like a snake striking at something far beyond its length. It guides the lightning that always follows, crashing down to the tower.

The scientific importance of this, said McEachron, is to prove that the shape of an object on earth often will decide the direction of the initial lightning stroke. Lightning usually strikes downward. A cloud starts it. But the Empire State building many times pops at the clouds.

The camera settled a long controversy. The dispute was about which direction lightning branches, up or down. Pictures showed both directions. The Empire State evidence shows that the branches will go in the direction of the original stroke.

This original stroke is not seen by the human eye. It is a series of lance-shaped flashes, each about 200 feet long. These, one after the other, seem to "drill" a path in the air for the man stroke of fire. Each lance proceeds a little farther than the one before.

Often, McEachron said, there may be 30 of these lances before a flash. Occasionally they take a hundredth of a second to build the pathway. They can start either from earth or from the sky.

They explain, McEachron said, the ripping sound in a thunder clap.

The first time a lightning camera catches a stroke hitting a tree, McEachron said, men will understand why it is dangerous to be underneath. Sparks and streamers of fire undoubtedly will be seen spreading over the ground at the base of the trunk, he predicted.

Tribute Is Paid To Miss Earhart By First Lady

Tells NYA Conference Flier Was Inspiration for Youth.

A two-day conference of the National Youth Administration advisory committee was opened yesterday by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in the Willard Hotel.

After outlining achievements of the youth movement, Mrs. Roosevelt paid tribute to Amelia Earhart for her appeal, as a person, to the young people of the country.

"I wanted us to begin this meeting having her in mind for what she did for us and the young people," she said.

Charles W. Taussig, chairman of the advisory committee, traced activities of the NYA from its founding in 1935 and said $132,486,403 had been made available from emergency funds to aid nearly 500,000 youths between 16 and 25.

Under its present rate of operation, said Aubrey Williams, executive director of the administration's youth program, the NYA will have to be greatly expanded.

The aim of the NYA is national, Williams said, and its chief purpose is to equalize educational opportunities throughout the country.

Lehigh Gerdin was cited as an example of what the NYA is doing for the country's youth. Through its aid, Gerdin was able to continue studies at the University of North Dakota and was awarded a Rhodes Scholarship.

The advisory committee will be received by the President today. Others attending yesterday's session were John L. Lewis, C. I. O. head; Dr. Charles H. Judd, University of Chicago; Owen D. Young, chairman of the board, General Electric, and Glenn Cunningham, famous track star.

New Efficency Abroad Sought By Ribbentrop

Staff Throughout World to Be Affected by His 'Co-ordination' Plan.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 8.—A Nazi spokesman tonight forecast a thorough-going "co-ordination" of the foreign office under Joachim von Ribbentrop.

He said it would be designed to insure its functioning as a real Nazi organization from the foreign minister down to the last clerk in the smallest faraway legation.

There was considerable speculation among diplomats over when von Ribbentrop would assume his new duties as foreign minister. He replaced the conservative Baron Konstantin von Neurath, who became chairman of the secret cabinet council in last week's governmental and army shakeup.

With von Neurath no longer signing himself as foreign minister and von Ribbentrop not officially in charge, Germany technically seemed to be without a foreign minister for the moment.

Politically, Berlin was calm again after the recent stormy upheavals.

In the reorganized war ministry, new appointees were getting their bearings and, in the economic ministry, work was underway on execution of the four-year plan for German economic self-sufficiency.

It has been clearly indicated that Germany does not again want to find herself as she was in 1914—prepared militarily, but economically deficient.

Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering was represented as determined to see that Germany be prepared for all eventualities, not only through the four-year economic-planning period, but afterward.

Informed persons believed a secret domestic council would be organized to bring internal planning into step with the foreign council Hitler created in his shakeup.

Bankers Plead For Chance at 'Real Self-Rule'

By the Associated Press.

Investment bankers asked a Congressional committee yesterday to give them a chance at "real self-regulation" rather than securities commission supervision.

Francis E. Frothingham, white-haired Boston financier and president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, told the Senate Banking Committee it would be a mistake to approve pending legislation to permit over-the-counter dealers in securities to impose self-regulation under strict supervision of the SEC.

Learns of Stagnation.

"Gentlemen, do not burden business with additional fears, restraints and intimidation if you want it to make good," he said.

Frothingham argued that this legislation, unless modified to permit voluntary action, would have the "stagnating influence of overriding authority" that was "based on ultimate intimidation."

"My personal feeling is that unless the bill can be made truly self-regulatory it should not be passed," he said.

His Plans Supported.

Half a dozen other officials of investment bankers' organizations followed Frothingham as witnesses and supported his pleas.

B. Howell Griswold, jr., Baltimore, speaking for the Investment Bankers Conference, Inc., said the majority of its 1,700 members approved the first part of the pending legislation "with minor changes."

Restriction of the measure to the first section would eliminate SEC provisions the Frothingham group opposed.

Catastrophe Stage Held Near in China

A catastrophe without precedent is imminent in China unless food and medical help for millions of suffering civilians is forthcoming at once, the International Red Cross at Geneva has notified Red Cross societies of 62 nations.

In an appeal to the American Red Cross, Max Huber, president of the international committee, transmitted the report of Dr. Louis Calame, the committee's official representative in China.

Dr. Calame stated that famine and epidemics, if not curbed now, will undoubtedly result in a calamity without precedent.

"Actually behind the front are 100 military hospitals and 150 civilian hospitals, all overflowing with sick people," he stated. "For the relief of all this misery, money is needed to employ physicians, attendants and nurses, who for the most part would be well trained foreign residents now living in China."

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Tonight's Top Event: A discussion of the career program for the Federal service as advocated by the Council of Personnel Administration will be held this evening at an open meeting of the Council in the Departmental Auditorium on Constitution avenue. Emphasis will be laid on transfer, training and supervision with discussion leaders, as follows:

F. P. Brassor (Securities and Exchange Commission); Dr. R. W. Kelly (HOLC); Malcolm Kerlin (Commerce); W. H. McReynolds (Treasury); Maj. Sidney Morgan (Tariff Commission), and Dr. L. J. O'Rourke, the Council's director.

The Council—an independent body of Federal personnel administrators established by Executive order to improve and co-ordinate personnel administration—has a program, which sums up as follows:

1. A current personnel inventory that will bring qualified employes already in the Federal service to the attention of the appointing officers.

2. A transfer system between departments and between department divisions that will make possible transfer and advancement.

3. The opening of definite avenues of promotion so that employes can look forward to satisfactory careers in the public service.

4. A training program to prepare employes for increasingly responsible positions.

Early sign of spring, or they like our cherry trees: The National Capital Parks people report that already inquiries come fast regarding the probable date for the blooming of the cherry trees on the Tidal Basin. Generally, the inquiries don't start coming in before March, even April. But, says the office of Ed Kelly, the inquiries about the 1938 blooms began arriving in December. The number is increasing—and indicating, it was thought, a big influx onto Washington when comes the spring.

Corridor Talk: A U. S. Forest ranger came to town the other day and after looking upon a Washington he hadn't seen in years spoke out bluntly on the thing that impressed him the most. It wasn't the vast buildings or the ever-increasing population, or the publicized crime wave or the disputes in Interior. It was the fancy way the Fort Myer horsemen ride that caught him. And the small saddles they use. "I'm thinking of the Western saddles," he reflected; "they haven't got enough handles on the saddles at Fort Myer. I don't see how they stay on." And otherwise, he had precisely the same reaction as Spotted Owl, the South Dakota Indian who came here not long ago: "There're too many people in such a small town" . . .

DO YOU KNOW WHO DEPARTment: (Yesterday we presented Maj. Ralph I. Graves, of the Procurement Division of Treasury). Now we offer a gentleman perhaps more widely known and equally as estimable. His sun-baked drawl is known from one corridor of Interior to another and he has a wholesome way of offering you a cigar, though he never smokes cigars himself. Instead he rolls his cigarettes and talks drousing words through the active smoke. When all the Federal world was thinking that Interior boys and girls were a dead lot, our subject organized them and electrified their recreational activities in the daily press. Steadfastly, he has refused to let his own name be mentioned in connection with the organization he works for; but he, himself, has written hundreds, maybe thousands, of names in his organization's house organ. He sits up late on the monthly magnum opus, conceives all manner of enterprise for his organization, then attends the various functions and lurks in the background, apparently not having much fun but actually full of the best joy because the function is a success. You guessed him the first time, but we'll state his identity tomorrow. . . .

The March radio program subjects of the Office of Education (Interior) is magnificently calculated to catch the imagination. On March 6 they offer "Men Vs. Insects," commenting: "Insects comprise the earth's largest population. They are charged by science with the propagation of disease. In the perpetual war between man and his insect enemies who will win? At least one famous entomologist believes that man might eventually lose" . . . And on March 20, "Rockets and Planets": "Rockets interest both scientists and laymen. What conditions will face rocket flyers if they ever succeed in their attempt to conquer the space between the earth and the planets that surround it?" . . .

The Federal Workers School—the U. F. W. A.'s child that has gained national attention—starts its mid-winter term auspiciously. Miss Hepburn told how some 70 registrations had come yesterday; which is a big advance over the number at the opening of the first term. . . . The formation of a chapter, in the Philadelphia Navy Yard, of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians is announced by Lewis Alan Berne, the president. The chartering of this new chapter marks the first step in the organizational drive among the technical men in the Navy Yards by the C. I. O. Chapters and locals already have been formed in Washington, Brooklyn and the Navy Department. The Federation is a technical union affiliated to the C. I. District Scouts Continue 38th Birthday Fete

150 Meet at Roosevelt High; Other Services Are Scheduled.

Local observance of the twenty-eighth anniversary of the founding of the Boy Scouts of America continued last night with a special session of the University of Scouting at the Roosevelt High School.

More than 150 men, attending the university to receive training in scout leadership, celebrated last night with a review of the history of the organization since its establishment in 1910 and joined with scouts throughout the country in taking the scout oath.

Observance of the anniversary will conclude Saturday when members of the National Capital Area Council will mobilize at the Palace Theater for an hour's entertainment and then march to the Lincoln Memorial to participate in Lincoln Day services with the District of Columbia Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion.

Final religious services of the celebration will be conducted at 11 a. m. Saturday when Jewish scouts will assemble at the Adas Israel Synagogue, Sixth and I streets northwest. Catholic and Protestant services were held Sunday in churches throughout the city.

The local council, which includes the District and 18 counties in Maryland and Virginia, recently reported an increase of more than 1,000 members and 33 new units. Membership of the local council on December 3, 1937, was 5,764 boys and 1,733 men, highest in its history.

First Lady to Head Earhart Campaign

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will become honorary chairman of the Amelia Earhart Foundation national sponsors committee, it has been announced at the White House.

In accepting the chairmanship, Mrs. Roosevelt said she felt the women of America should not allow Miss Earhart's memory to fade and that the woman flier's "life and work should remain an inspiration to the younger generation of women today and to those who will follow us."

She praised the foundation, launched by Thiel College, an institution with which Miss Earhart's family has been associated for 70 years. Part of the foundation's purpose is to create post-graduate scholarships for women interested in social service work.

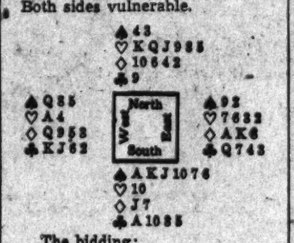
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

One Gift Is Enough.

In match-point duplicate it is declarer's duty to appraise the contract he has reached and (a) if it is a good one, to play conservatively in order to insure himself against defeat; or (b) if the contract is not good, to play in a "wide open fashion," looking to overtricks for compensation. When the defenders, however, have presented declarer with at least one unearned trick, it is foolish for him then to risk his contract in a search for more loot.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

North had a problem over South's two spade rebid. Caution advised a pass, but there was a distinct chance that such a course would mean the abandonment of a game. From North's point of view South might be able to bid four hearts merely upon hearing about a rebiddable suit in North's hand. All in all, I think North's three heart bid was the best action available, even though it did result in a dangerous contract.

West opened a low diamond. East won with the King and, instead of taking his cue from dummy's singleton club and making the logical shift to a trump, continued with the diamond Ace, and a third round.

Declarer ruffed, and led his heart ten. West jumped up and, since he could not well afford a trump lead from the Queen, led the diamond Queen, East discarding a heart and declarer ruffing. The club Ace was cashed and a club ruffed, then a third club discarded on the heart King.

When East followed to the heart Queen, declarer could count that West was out of hearts. Of course, he could have discarded his last club and allowed West to ruff but this would not insure the contract. West might ruff with a worthless trump and declarer still might have to lose to the spade Queen. Realizing that the defenders had failed in their opportunity to knock out dummy's trumps, declarer determined not to return the gift. He ruffed the heart Queen with the spade Ace, then ruffed his last club in dummy.

As it happened, it would have been equally safe to have discarded a club on the heart Queen. But, if the cards had lain slightly differently—for instance, if East had had the spade Queen twice guarded, this play would have been fatal. As it was, declarer insured his contract for a very good match-point score.

Civic Groups Move To Make Shrine of Naval Hero's Home

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 8.—A movement to establish a local association to purchase and preserve as a shrine the house here in which John Paul Jones, Revolutionary naval hero, is said to have lived, has been launched here.

Patriotic societies and other organizations will be asked to support the movement as the result of a decision by the Naval Historical Foundation of Washington not to acquire the building for a naval museum.

Capt. Dudley W. Knox, executive of the naval foundation, said yesterday that a memorial of some other sort will be established here since architects from the National Park Service and other experts have reported the house cannot be positively identified as erected prior to the Revolutionary War.

House Speeds Farm Bill for Passage Today

Farm

port of farmers and embodies the necessary provisions to constitute the basis for a sound and permanent national program for agriculture and should be passed by the Congress."

Grange Half-Hearted.

Speaking for the National Grange, Brenckman said the Grange is "in accord" with some provisions of the bill, but opposes compulsory control.

"The major provisions of the bill," said Brenckman, "call for a degree of Governmental control and regimentation that is wholly unnecessary and that is incompatible with all our best American ideals and traditions."

The bill carries about $500,000,000 in appropriations, insufficient, proponents say, to make "parity" payments to farmers. An attempt to raise more funds by a processing tax amendment to the next revenue bill will be made in the Senate.

O'Mahoney to Fight.

Chief point of controversy in the House debate was a conference modification in the Boileau-McNary dairy amendment. The amendment originally precluded farmers from raising livestock or other products for market on land diverted from major crops. Conferees largely limited the amendment to dairy cattle in any given county, when "substantial" increases were noted.

A proposal to broaden slightly the amendment through a special joint resolution failed to placate Representative Gerald Boileau (Progressive), Wisconsin, and other dairy spokesmen. Boileau demanded defeat of the report and orders to conferees to strengthen the dairy provision in the farm bill itself. He said a joint resolution might be waylaid in the House or in the Rules Committee.

A fight later this week in the Senate was presaged when Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, wrote Western Senators that the present amendment would not protect dairy, live stock and poultry industries from competition by farmers making use of diverted land. He said farmers could "use any land withdrawn from cotton, wheat, corn, tobacco or rice for producing live stock."

Church Forces Reading.

But unlike Boileau, O'Mahoney suggested a joint resolution might carry the change, avoiding recommittal of the conference report.

Charges that the rule under which the bill was considered "gagged" the House and the bill itself would "regiment" the American farmer were hurled from the minority side of the House as soon as discussion opened. Representative Ralph E. Church (Republican), of Illinois, forced reading of the conference report by objecting to unanimous-consent requests that the reading be dispensed with.

Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, assistant minority leader, led the attack on the so-called "gag" rule, which he called a "parliamentary outrage." He said the Administration wanted to "railroad" the bill "because it didn't want the members to know" what was in it.

Representative Lindsay Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, retorted that Martin had opposed "every farm bill offered by this Administration" and declared hasty action was needed as "the planting season is just about on."

O'Connor Denies "Gag."

"If we follow the gentleman from Massachusetts," Warren said, "we will get no farm bill at all."

Chairman John J. O'Connor, of the Rules Committee, said the debate limitation "was just the opposite of a gag." He pointed out the normal rules would permit only one hour debate and said "if this is a gag, every rule to expedite business is a gag."

Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee, chairman of the House farm conferees, declared the bill's aim is to place agriculture on equality with industry, which has tariff protection. He said the hope was to "stabilize" prices.

"If you defeat this bill," said Jones, "you won't have anything. "Anybody in favor of equality for agriculture can't fail to support it."

This map shows how one tragedy led to another in the frozen wastes of the Arctic Sea. First, four Soviet scientists encamped at the North Pole drifted south on an ice floe (heavy black line). Then rescue attempts were made by plane and boat, and Tuesday the Soviet dirigible V-6, flying from Moscow (dotted line) on a test flight preparatory to a rescue try, crashed at Kandalaksha with a loss of 13 lives.

Assault Suspect Trapped on Train

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—Six local policemen last night arrested James Walters, 23, colored, of Lester Manor, King William County, for West Point, Va., authorities, where he was said to be wanted for assaulting and robbing an aged white woman yesterday.

Walters was turned over to Sheriff J. T. Mitchell, of King William County, this morning.

He was trapped as he occupied a seat in a northbound train last night. He gave no resistance.

West Point, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—Sheriff J. T. Mitchell of King William County said James Walter, alias Irving Brookes, was returned to the West Point jail today following his arrest in Fredericksburg in connection with robbery of Mrs. Tom Hand, of Cohoke Station.

Sheriff Mitchell said Mrs. Hand was robbed of $40 and beaten in her home yesterday by a colored man. Mrs. Hand suffered bruises about the head and face, Sheriff Mitchell said.

Driver Is Warned He Exposed Self To Meningitis

Taxicab drivers, read this. To one of you, it may be worth your life.

Late Monday 10-year-old Mary Jane Gibson, of the 700 block of Seventh street southeast, was roller skating and playing, a normal, healthy child. Early yesterday she was dead—of an extremely contagious type of epidemic cerebrospinal meningitis.

A taxicab drove her to Providence Hospital. But the police who investigated the case did not obtain the cabman's name.

Dr. C. J. Murphy, assistant coroner, said the cabman, if he reads this, should present himself to a physician, explain what has happened, and follow the doctor's advice.

Receipt by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison of confidential battleship plans, described as "of vital importance" and believed to be specifications under which the projected 35,000-ton battleships can effectively carry 18-inch guns.

At his press conference, President Roosevelt was asked about the possible construction of a canal through Nicaragua, by correspondents bearing in mind it might be impossible for ships of tonnage greater than 35,000 tons to pass through the Panama Canal.

The President was noncommittal, but reminded newsmen of a passage in his message to Congress on national defense wherein he noted the uncertain safety of the Panama Canal, at present the only short cut from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

In his seventh appearance before the House Naval Affairs Committee, Admiral Leahy said:

"In the fleet we work with airplanes every day of the year, and it is my belief that the American Navy has the best trained and the most efficient air service in existence.

Battleships Best Defense.

"We believe aviation to be as essential a part of the national defense at sea as the guns of our battleships, and it is the opinion of the navies of the world that a modern battleship is the best defense against air attack at sea, and the most difficult problem that faces the air arm of any navy.

"The purpose of a fleet in any war is to control certain sea areas vital to success in that war. The battleship is the nucleus of that fleet, the bulwark of offensive and defensive power upon which all other types must depend for support when driven back by superior forces. Among all naval types, it is the one which, when properly accompanied by supporting ships and planes, can go farther, stay longer and fight harder than any other craft which travels on, under or above the sea."

Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, quoted to Leahy the late Rear Admiral Sims, retired, as saying that if the United States got into a war the best thing it could do would be to take its battleships and "hide them in the Mississippi River."

Comes to His Defense.

Representative Delaney (Democrat), of New York, coming to Leahy's defense, asked:

"When a man retires from the Navy at the age of 65, isn't he likely to write a lot of things that don't conform to the facts?"

Leahy answered:

"That's putting it very charitably."

President Roosevelt, asked at his conference to take a stand on the relative efficiency of battleships and airplanes, refused to do so, replying that every male older than 12—he refused to speak for the women—was an amateur strategist. He repeated this answer when asked if he favored separate fleets for the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Senator Pittman, talking to reporters after the brief scene in the Senate, said the State Department's "definite and emphatic answer to the Johnson resolution clearly demonstrates the foreign policy of our Government and the necessity to be prepared to protect ourselves."

He continued:

"The continued greed for conquest by the military powers and their feverish increase in war instrumentalities will inevitably force wars on peace-loving peoples, unless the military powers change their course."

He indicated his belief that the democratic powers—Great Britain, France and the United States—would be at a "disadvantage" in a war with the "military powers."

The export licenses for the shipment of arms and munitions, published monthly by the State Department, revealed a total value of war materials covered by 404 licenses during January to be $6,765,112.

Second to Argentina was the Netherlands, one of the most consistently heavy purchasers of American-made armaments. The Dutch obtained licenses for $594,535.40, chiefly in aircraft.

Niemoeller Ousts Attorneys, Defies Judges at Nazi Trial

ity, particularly among the junkers and old-school army officers, was revealed today when the prosecution announced that two or three of the five charges against him had been dropped.

The most serious charges—misuse of his pulpit to attack the Nazi state and party and attacks upon authority of the government—remained against him, however.

Niemoeller was questioned regarding his career, in the navy and in the pulpit, and a roll call was made of the witnesses to be heard.

In evangelical churches throughout Germany increased congregations were reported at prayer services which will continue daily throughout the trial, which is expected to last for seven days.

Secret police of the "Gestapo" kept a close watch today on all persons entering the court building.

Everyone leaving the courtroom (they needed special passes to enter past the guards) was followed and shadowed by detectives, in order to prevent them, if possible, from reporting the proceedings to newspaper correspondents.

Germans In Dark.

Meanwhile most Germans remained in ignorance that Niemoeller was on trial.

The official news agency carried a paragraph on the first day's proceedings in its service for foreign newspapers but did not mention the trial in its regular service. Newspapers ignored it.

Roosevelt Maps Two Programs To Aid Business

Loan

Under one plan under consideration, the RFC would form a national mortgage association by subscribing to $10,000,000 of the capital stock of the institution, which would be under the supervision of the FHA. Under the recently approved amendments to the FHA act, the association could issue bonds up to 20 times that amount or $200,000,000. The bonds would be sold to individual and institutional investors. This money would be loaned on Government-insured mortgages on large-scale housing projects costing $1,000,000 or more.

When the resources of this first institution are exhausted, under the plan, it could issue further capital stock to be purchased either by the RFC or by private investors, or the RFC might set up another mortgage association in another part of the country. Eventually it is expected the RFC will sell its stock-holding in such a company to private investors.

Another Plan Outlined.

Another plan under consideration would have private investors subscribe to the common stock of the mortgage association with the RFC subscribing a substantial amount to an issue of preferred stock. The difficulty with this plan is that no private investors have yet been found to take the common stock or share the risk with the RFC.

Still another viewpoint would have the RFC subscribe $50,000,000 to the capital stock of a mortgage association, thus giving it a bond-issuing power of $1,000,000,000. This proposal was prompted by psychological reasons, since it could be said the Government had established a potential reservoir of $1,000,000,000 for a housing program.

The need for Government assistance in providing industrial loans for "little business" is much clearer than methods of accomplishing this end. Small businessmen have convinced the Administration that as a result of certain New Deal legislation they find it extremely difficult, if not impossible, to obtain comparatively moderate sums for plant expansion.

Called Uneconomic.

In the first place, the undistributed profits tax has made it uneconomic to plow earned profits back into the business, as was formerly done. Revision of the undistributed profits tax will relieve small business of that burden, but it will not fully meet its problem of getting funds for plant expansion, it is contended.

Commercial banks are reluctant to make loans of from five to ten years or longer for plant expansion in sums of $500,000 or $1,000,000. Prior to the New Deal a small business could float at little expense a security issue to cover such an expenditure, and in some instances the businessman's bank would help the operation along by underwriting the security issue. Banks are now forbidden to underwrite security issues.

Moreover, the procedure of registering each security issue with the SEC, compiling the required information and making reports to that agency, are said to have made small security issues costly.

The Federal Reserve banks have authority to make direct loans to small industry, but only for purpose of working capital. The RFC has authority to make direct loans to solvent industry, when unavailable elsewhere, for any purpose that will maintain and increase employment. But such loans cannot be made for a maturity after January 31, 1945, nor for an aggregate amount of more than $300,000,000.

Moreover, this as well as other lending powers of the RFC were curbed by a Presidential order last October.

One plan under consideration at the White House is for the President to rescind his October order insofar as it applies to industrial loans. Several minor amendments to the RFC law also have been proposed, such as permitting industrial loans to be made for a 10 or 15 year period.

This is held to be the easiest and quickest way to relieve the present situation, since the RFC machinery is set up and ready to function. But it is held to be only a temporary solution and one which puts the Government in the money-lending business without supplying any incentive to private enterprise to take over the making of such loans.

Thus another plan under consideration is the establishment of a corporation to make such loans, with either the RFC or the Federal Reserve banks subscribing the initial capital. Such an institution would have power to issue bonds for sale to the public on a basis of around ten times its capital. For instance, if the Government agencies subscribed $100,000,000 capital, the corporation could issue $1,000,000,000 of bonds, thus giving it a loan power of $1,100,000,000.

Under the plan these bonds would not be guaranteed by the Treasury nor would the loans be insured, but the bonds would be eligible collateral for banks at the Federal Reserve Banks, thus giving liquidity to such securities and making them desirable bank investments. The corporation would make loans up to approximately $2,500,000 that would run for 10 or 12 years. In time, the capital stock might be sold to private investors, with the corporation subject to Government supervision.

The Federal Reserve Banks have an "industrial loan fund" of approximately $140,000,000, which sum represented their surplus accumulations up to 1933, was subscribed by them to stock in the Deposit Insurance Corporation and subsequently was returned to them by the Secretary of the Treasury to use in making industrial loans. If the reserve banks are required to subscribe to an industrial loan corporation the money would come out of this fund.

One of these plans or a program based on features from each of them is expected soon to be sponsored by the President and his Administration to relieve the need of small business for plant expansion loans.

Capone Goes Berserk at 'Rock;' Put Under Psychiatrist's Care

at Springfield, Mo. First, however, the Government would make certain that the one-time "big shot," who is serving 10 years for income tax evasion, is not malingering in order to effect a transfer.

The Associated Press reported that Dr. Edward Twitchell, consulting psychiatrist for Alcatraz, acknowledged he had visited Capone.

Meanwhile Abraham Teitelbaum, counsel for the Chicago gang chieftain, asked the Supreme Court to set aside a one-year sentence his client faces in Cook County, Ill., upon completion of his Federal sentence. It will expire in 1942.

Several months ago Capone was stabbed in the back by a fellow convict, and he was reported to be unpopular with the 300 prisoners on the island.

The New York-born racketeer originally was set to Atlanta Penitentiary but was shifted to Alcatraz shortly after that former military stronghold was returned to use as a penal institution for the more desperate type of Federal prisoners.

According to the San Francisco News, Capone astounded guards last week when he donned his blue uniform, which is reserved for Sundays and holidays. Later he refused to leave his cell for breakfast and, when finally persuaded to go, slumped unconscious to the floor. He was removed to the infirmary, which is in the main cell block.

"Capone suddenly went berserk," the newspaper said, "kicking several convicts and spitting in the faces of others. He spends hours laboriously making his bed and taking it apart again.

"Most of the time he sits dejectedly in his hospital cell, an expression of bewilderment on his face. Occasionally he bursts into arias from Italian operas."

Brother Surprised.

Chicago, Feb. 8 (AP).—Ralph Capone tonight said the news that his brother, Al Capone, was under observation in the hospital ward at Alcatraz prison was a surprise to him.

"Two of our brothers visited him on February 1 and they found him feeling and looking good," Capone remarked.

He said he had telephoned the prison after reading of the former Chicago gangster's illness.

"The warden said he had sent his report to Washington and I'd have to get my information there," Capone said.

Grady is under indictment for soliciting a bribe from Bryan C. Hanks, president of the power company. Grady claims the power company conspired to win a city rate case by blackmail.

Builders' Chief Accuses WPA of 'Interference'

Contractors' President Asks Curtailment of Work Relief Projects.

Warning all industries to guard against socialization, W. A. Klinger, of Sioux City, Iowa, president of the General Contractors of America, yesterday charged that the WPA was interfering with the construction business.

"The WPA, under Harry Hopkins, has become increasingly construction-minded," said Klinger, addressing delegates to the nineteenth annual convention of the association at the Willard Hotel.

"It has become increasingly ambitious. In carrying out its program it is interfering more and more with industry, and taking away more and more of the market.

Asks Curtailment.

The association intimated that private industry would attempt to take over a large part of the work relief problem if the Administration would curtail the WPA program.

Spokesmen for the 500 delegates asserted Congress would be asked to withdraw WPA labor from Government low-cost housing projects, redistribute WPA employment and repeal the undistributed profits tax.

If that were done, the Nation's contract building concerns would move to rehire some 2,000,000 workmen dropped from their pay rolls since the depression, they said.

That could be done, they added, if WPA would release for the unskilled jobs in factories and elsewhere some 2,000,000 persons now on work-relief to replace former building workers who would be taken back into industry.

About 1,000,000 men now are employed in the contracting business, they said, whereas formerly there were 3,000,000.

Hits "Make-Work."

Protesting against "make-work" legislation, John J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, told the delegates that the bill which would limit the length of freight trains to 70 cars would seriously injure the railways.

He also pleaded for higher freight rates, so the railroads might prosper.

"While the business of railroading is like other businesses in that it has to make ends meet," said Pelley, "it does not share their freedom to adjust prices to meet changing costs.

"For four years, and increasingly in the past 12 months, the unit prices of the things which railroads use have been rising. The prices of materials and supplies, for which the industry normally spends a billion dollars a year, have gone up some 40 per cent. Taxes are up by 25 per cent; wage rates by 18 per cent. And at the same time the level of our average revenue per-ton mile has gone down 10 per cent. The rate level today, in short, cannot meet today's cost.

Benefits Recognized.

"The benefits to all forms of industry from healthy railroads able to buy things they need, and to expand employment, seems to be widely recognized," he said.

Train service today is better than ever before, despite economic problems, Pelley pointed out. The railroads are not "on the way out." Government ownership is not necessary at all, he asserted.

"If any section of the country could not be served adequately by private ownership, then it is time for the Government to take over operation," he said.

The Army Engineer Corps is proud of its accomplishments during the recent period of expanding public works construction, Maj. Gen. Julian K. Schley, Chief of Engineers, told the delegates.

"Prior to the depression," said he, "the annual appropriation for waterways improvement for navigation and flood control undertaken by the Government averaged $40,000,000 to $50,000,000.

"Under the augmented Public Works program, these funds have averaged almost $200,000,000 annually. During the last five years, the sum of $538,000,000 has been allocated to the Engineer Department for emergency relief appropriations, which, with the funds already appropriated, provided a total of $1,030,000,000.

80 Per Cent to Labor.

"Our records show that about 80 per cent of the money goes to labor, of which from 50 to 55 per cent goes to labor on the site of the work. I know of no other class of useful public works which provides more employment for the expenditures made."

Gen. Schley pointed out that since the establishment of the Public Works program, the Engineer Corps has entered into 3,222 construction contracts with 1,149 different contractors.

Growth of highway contracting with the increase of automobiles and other motor vehicles was traced for the delegates by Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the Bureau of Public Roads.

He used charts to show the increase in construction, the expansion of the Nation's motor traffic and the growth of gasoline consumption.

The Cushman Trophy, awarded annually to the chapter making the greatest progress in membership in the last year, was presented to E. A. Fretz, president of the Fretz Construction Co., of Houston, Tex.

N. Y. Floods Drop, Ruin Unestimated

Amsterdam, N. Y., Feb. 8 (AP).—Flood waters receded gradually along the lower Mohawk valley tonight, leaving in their wake heavy deposits of mud and unestimated property damage.

Colder waather was said by Leroy C. Hulburd, assistant commissioner of State canals, to have definitely ended the flood menace.

This city of 34,000 persons, which bore the brunt of flood damage, was returning to normal as the river receded from city streets in the southside section.

Gas service, interrupted yesterday, was reported 50 per cent restored.

Coal Car Crash Blocks Annapolis Rail Traffic

Linthicum, Md., Feb. 8 (AP).—Traffic on the Baltimore-Annapolis line of the Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad was blocked for five hours early today by wreckage of a coal car and piles of coal.

The loaded gondola, its brakes out of control, roared from a siding and onto the main line here, crashed into a standing coal car, telescoped and scattered wreckage over the track. No passenger cars were using the tracks at that time. No one was injured.

Prospect Good For New C. I. O. Steel Contract

Progress Reported After Conference of 45 Minutes; Settlement Seen.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 8.—Prospects seemed bright today for a new contract between the Committee for Industrial Organization and the U. S. Steel Corporation.

Conferees for C. I. O. and for "Big Steel" adjourned their conferences until tomorrow afternoon after a meeting of a scant 45 minutes, from which they emerged with every appearance of amity.

The fact they considered it necessary to give no more time than they did to the conference, and the further fact that spokesmen commented there had been "progress," led to the supposition that the greatest obstacles had been jumped, and that not much was left to be argued out.

Sees Settlement.

A C. I. O. informant supported that view with the private remark that it appeared "everything would be settled" soon.

About the closed conference room there circulated the customary number of rumors, most of them dealing with wages.

The present minimum for U. S. Steel's workers affected by the C. I. O. contracts is $5 a day. C. I. O. has the right, under the existing agreement, to bargain for its own members. The present contract, expiring February 28, has no closed shop feature, and there has been no authoritative indication the closed shop is now being asked.

The public expressions of the conferees were confined to generalities.

"I would say progress is being made," remarked President Benjamin Fairless of U. S. Steel.

REG CARRINGTON ASKS COMMANDER ELLSBERG:

"Can you tell a Real Difference between Camels and other cigarettes?"

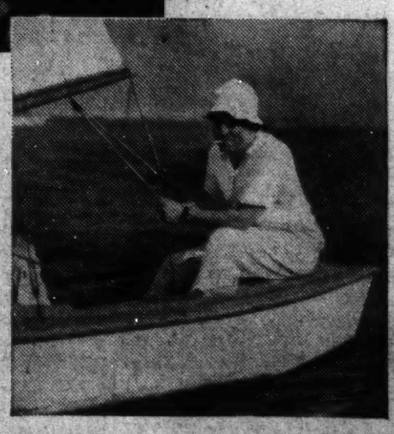
REG CARRINGTON: "I see you're a steady Camel smoker, Commander. There really isn't any difference in cigarettes, is there?"
COMMANDER ELLSBERG: "You're dead wrong, Reg. The life of a deep-sea diver is tougher on a man than most work. Most of the divers I know are steady Camel smokers and, believe me, they know there's a difference. Take my own case, for example. I stick to Camels—have smoked 'em for ten years. They never get on my nerves. Smoking Camels, I feel that I enjoy life more. Camel is the cigarette that agrees with me."

CLUB-ROOM CONVERSATION (above) so often swings around to cigarettes—an interesting topic to smokers generally. "I can tell the difference in Camels," Commander Ellsberg says. "That famous saying, 'I'd walk a mile for a Camel!' expresses how enthusiastic I am about Camels myself. Camels have such an appealing flavor."

"Absolutely!" says Commander Edward Ellsberg. And millions of other steady smokers agree that Camels have what they want. They know there is a distinct difference in Camels. That's why Camels are the largest-selling cigarette in the world.

A MAN OF ACTION! (right) Commander Ellsberg was the first man to dive to a depth of 20 fathoms. He shares under-sea danger with his men. He says: "The last thing a diver does before going down—and the first thing after coming up—is to smoke a Camel. In work like this, men really appreciate the way Camels hit the spot."

THE ELLSBERG TORCH (left), an invention of Commander Edward Ellsberg. Imagine the long hours of research he put in on this successful invention! Ellsberg is used to fatigue. He says of Camels: "I've found that smoking a Camel after an hour under water—or any tour of duty—gives me a quick 'lift.'"



OF COURSE an Annapolis man likes to sail! (right) Here's Commander Ellsberg enjoying his favorite sport—small-boat sailing. And Camels are right beside him! "Camels fit in with my leisure hours, too," he says. "It's only common sense that a cigarette made from such choice tobaccos would be a mild, tasty smoke. I've never known Camels to jangle my nerves. That means a lot—because I smoke a lot!"

High Pressure Education.

What many high school athletic stars have known, and what most recent college graduates have at least suspicioned, is now certified by the Carnegie Foundation for Teaching. In his annual report, President Walter Albert Jessup makes bitter comment on the proselyting and exploitation practiced on many students.

Even "drum majors and tuba players" have become objects for competitive bidding, according to Dr. Jessup. Such inanity cannot be general among accredited institutions. But the further statement that a campus officer recently found himself the eighty-third within a year who had visited a small Midwestern high school in order to influence seniors in their choice of a college, indicates the intensity of the rivalry for new students.

Higher education in this country apparently finds itself today somewhat in the position of the Red Queen who had to keep running in order not to move backward. "In this highly competitive world," Dr. Jessup explains, "many institutions [of higher learning] operate in constant fear of losing tuition-paying students." Popularity, in potential students' minds, must be maintained. The scholarships offered to talented high school pupils are one result; elaborate publicity efforts are another; a third is seen in some of the "new" educational programs and housing plans regularly announced from college administration buildings.

The ultimate failure of such "high-pressuring," according to Dr. Jessup, may be learned from the business world. Cut rates, rebates and extravagant claims carry their own punishment. A recent study by the Carnegie Foundation revealed, among Pennsylvania college graduates, a general dissatisfaction over the waste, aimlessness and devious effort of their educational careers.

Hope that higher education will shift its emphasis from quantity to quality is strengthened by the growing trend of top-flight institutions toward stricter admission standards. Recently Harvard joined this movement. Other universities will not ignore this leader's action. Complete realignment of educational aims will not be accomplished, however, until the general public learns that a college diploma is not a through ticket to success or even security.

Diet And Destiny.

A refrigeration expert advocates development of "a universal meat" to improve international relations. He suggests that Japan, which lives today so largely on rice, might well be weaned to a larger use of American meat. An immense new commerce would thus be stimulated, he submits, which could be expected to promote good neighborliness in the Pacific.

In his enthusiasm for the refrigerative aspects of the picture, the expert overlooks a number of important details. Nevertheless he is following a line of thought which is vital in every sense of the word. It is discussed with somewhat more deliberation by Rexford Guy Tugwell in Current History.

Hunger and its influence on history is his theme. He considers the effect of Nile floods and droughts on Egypt. The spread of Hellenic culture, he believes, may be attributed to the depletion of the Greek peninsula's soil and the consequent necessity for the city states to forage abroad. Discovery of the principle of crop rotation gave Europe its first boost out of the feudal darkness, he maintains. Fields theretofore left fallow at intervals were planted with clover and turnips, adding largely to the food supplies of man and beast and freeing the former from some of his enslavement to the sod.

The arrival from the New World of the potato and maize, both rich and hardy vegetables, hastened this important liberation, Mr. Tugwell states. As for the United States, agricultural machinery and the new technique of dry-farming have sent the majority of the population to live in cities. As a result, urban standards are supplanting the conservatisms of country life and it is suggested that present political confusion attests the strain of the transfer. Finally, diets today have become so finely developed that the whole world must co-operate to supply an individual's daily needs, with the consequence that more stable international relations are desperately necessary.

It is a compelling argument. Its essence, however, was propounded more than a century ago by Brillat-Savarin who, incidentally, also dabbled somewhat in molasses. As the great chef put it: "Tell me what you eat and I will tell you what you are."

Still Dependent On Tips.

The minimum wage scales fixed for women employes of hotels, restaurants and allied businesses appear to be a reasonable compromise between the plans submitted by the employer and employe groups. In some respects the decision may not prove satisfactory. But the board has certainly done a careful job of integrating the two viewpoints by which it was confronted.

Employes sought a minimum wage of $19.90 for all groups, without consideration of tips and with no deduction for meals. Employers asked for different minimum wage rates for waitresses, non-service employes and chambermaids, with guaranteed minima including tips. They rightly argued that to fix one minimum wage for all groups would result in gross discrimination against those who do not customarily receive gratuities. Accepting that logic, the board fixed four different minimum wage scales instead of three. But it rejected the employers' view that tips should be included within the minimum wage.

As a result, the minimum for waitresses is the lowest in the scale. In providing a bottom for such wages at $13.25, or $8.65 after the cost of meals and uniforms has been deducted, the board was undoubtedly making allowance for tips. For the average waitress the addition of gratuities to this minimum will doubtless mean a comfortable living wage. But it is generally agreed that no protection is needed for the average girl doing this sort of work. Protection is most needed at the bottom of the scale, where tips are likely to be meager or non-existent.

The employers thought waitresses should have a minimum of $15 per week, including tips. Minimum wages for other women engaged in retail service have been fixed by the board at $17. In effect, then, waitresses will still be dependent upon the uncertain flow of tips to give them a living wage. That is scarcely compatible with the spirit of the act, which is to guarantee working women sufficient income to protect their health and morals.

The public reaction to this minimum wage will bear watching. Realizing that a minimum scale of pay has been fixed for waitresses, patrons may not give tips as freely as they have done heretofore. There are indications that the recent publicity given to tipping has already decreased the amount of gratuities in some cases. If these factors tend to penalize waitresses depending upon tips to supplement their minimum wage, the board may have to reconsider its decision.

A Stronger Attitude.

Italy's acquiescence in the Anglo-French plan of drastic action against pirate submarines in the Mediterranean may, it is predicted in some quarters, pave the way for a new attempt to bring about an Italo-British rapprochement. Coming at a time when European tensions have mounted anew as a result of Hitler's assumption of direct personal command over the German army, any such development would be welcome. Yet many previous efforts to improve Italo-British friendship have proved abortive during the past year or so.

It is apparent, however, that Italy's action has made it easier for the London and Paris governments to meet the revived piracy menace effectively. They are now in a position to act with vigor and dispatch without fear of being embroiled with Mussolini. And the indications are that very stringent measures will now be taken in defense of French and British shipping carrying noncontraband to the ports of loyalist Spain.

Great Britain has warned the Spanish insurgents that any more attacks on British ships, either by submarines or airplanes, will meet with swift and drastic retaliation. This is in sharp contrast to the policy, hitherto pursued, of merely protesting against such attacks and demanding eventual compensation. This weak-kneed course has proved ineffective. There is good reason to believe, however, that the stiffening of the British attitude will achieve the intended purpose.

The patience of Great Britain, the British agent at Salamanca has been ordered to inform Franco, "is not inexhaustible." It is a warning that will not be lost on the insurgent leader. It is also a warning to others who have, during recent months, tended to regard Great Britain as a power whose interests can be indefinitely ignored or flouted.

Pleasures Of Bobbing.

It was an odd coincidence that yesterday's balmy breezes should have been chosen to waft into this office a communication from the North extolling the bobbing opportunities of the season. For of all activities that depend on bitter cold, bobbing nearly tops the list. The bobbing in question has nothing to do with milady's coiffure; its ostensible concern is fish.

Should a sharp reversal in our weather put ice on the Potomac when the shad run starts, a sort of bobbing would be seen. Bobbing is essentially fishing through the ice. But bobbing in the strict sense requires a tight little house mounted on runners and big enough to hold perhaps four friends This is dragged out across a frozen lake to a "deep" on the theory that when the thermometer drops fish go to the warm bottom to keep their sluggish blood fluid.

Trapdoors at each corner are opened and holes chiseled through the ice beneath. Hooks are baited and the bobbing begins. But it is cold business—feet in double stockings and heavy shoepacks begin to numb. So the jug that is a prerequisite to proper bobbing is produced. Its common effect is to make fingers quite insensitive to any faint nibblings at the end of a 200-foot line. As a result, few if any fish are caught. But this is of small consequence. In a world where so many pleasures are artificial, there is a strange comfort in snug companionship in the cold.

FHA's Modernization Loans.

The new housing act empowers the FHA to resume insurance of loans for repair and modernization of homes. It also authorizes the insurance of loans up to $2,500 for the erection of new houses in rural areas and regions near cities where the standards set up by the mutual mortgage insurance system are not applicable. Both these provisions have been sharply attacked by critics who point accusingly to losses incurred under the modernization insurance plan which expired last spring, and object to providing financial aid for farmers and rural dwellers under a plan designed to stimulate urban construction.

However, the preliminary statement issued by the FHA to lending institutions in regard to loans of this class indicates that every effort will be made to prevent credit abuses. The law itself no longer permits insurance of loans for the purchase of household machinery and equipment, such as stoves and refrigerators. Under the original act authorizing loans of this type, equipment supply companies were often tempted to increase sales of their goods on credit by high-pressure methods because they could shift risks of loss to lending institutions and ultimately to the FHA. A very large proportion of the loans now in default on which losses have been incurred is said to have been obtained for purchase of household equipment.

Hereafter the proceeds of insured modernization loans may be used only to repair or improve existing structures. Furthermore, the FHA has set up standards of eligibility for borrowers that should provide substantial safeguards against defaults. Borrowers must have an assured income and demonstrate their ability to repay loans. They must own the property to be improved or have leases running at least six months longer than the loans. In no case may such loans be made for more than five years.

There are also legal limitations upon the amounts that may be borrowed, the maximum being $10,000. And finally the FHA insures lending institutions against loss only up to 10 per cent of the total insured loans made. With all these restrictive provisions, losses by default should be reduced to a minimum if instructions are intelligently followed.

Similarly the mischief done by unnecessarily extending the provisions of the housing act to farm dwellings has been minimized by the provision that such loans may not exceed $2,500. The FHA announces also that security will be required in the form of a mortgage or deed of trust covering the property. And there will be "certain general construction requirements which will assist in protecting the investment of the home owner."

While the FHA has launched its program under the new housing act by calling attention to two of its least defensible features, it has done so in a way calculated to disarm critics and to strengthen hopes for a careful and competent administration of the major provisions of the act.

Reminder Of A Soviet Pledge.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The mysterious disappearance in Russia of the mysterious "Donald Robinsons" has been solved. They are in reality a pair named Rubens, and are under arrest on charges of alleged espionage. Since Mrs. Rubens is an American citizen, this country's representatives in Moscow are taking a hand in the case, but have thus far been unable to see the prisoner. No exception can be made, Soviet authorities say, to the rule that no representative of a foreign country may visit a prisoner during the course of an investigation.

The Soviet Union has the right to arrest suspected spies of any nationality, just as the United States has. But the present Russian ban on visits to the prisoner by American officials does not square with one of the terms agreed upon when this country recognized the U. S. S. R. in 1933. It was accepted by Maxim Litvinoff in his letter of November 16, 1933, to President Roosevelt, in this specific language:

In places of detention of all kinds, requests made by consular representatives to visit nationals of their country under arrest, or have them visited by their representatives, shall be granted without delay.

Secretary Hull, we trust, is losing no time in calling Moscow's attention to this guaranty, so that Mrs. Rubens' rights as an American citizen, whether or not she is a spy, may be properly safeguarded.

American "Loyalists."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A news item in The Post of February 6 announced that 60 members of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, who recently returned after serving with the Loyalist army in Spain, will hold a convention here this week-end, stage a parade and lay wreaths at the Lincoln Memorial and the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

What are these fellows doing here at a time when Franco is slaughtering their comrades and imperiling Teruel? Were they wounded, and if so, how badly? Did the adventure become stale? Or was it that the Loyalist treasury ran out?

Maybe, in view of that message of cheer certain members of Congress sent to the Spanish Cortes, they expect America to give them a bonus. In any event, it would be interesting to know who they are, why they went to Spain and—most important of all—why they ran out on their comrades when the fighting really got hot.

From one who pities the Spanish people, who sees them caught between two impossible tyrannies—the one represented by Communistic Valencia and the other by the Fascist, Franco. F. T. E.

Revolvers In Cars.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post of February 7 carried an item from Kearny, N. J., stating that five men had been arrested and were being held, in default of $3,000 bail, on charges of carrying concealed weapons. The chief of police stated that a highway patrolman had found a loaded revolver in the car.

Regardless of labor troubles at the bottom of this case, I want to know whether any officer of the law has any right to search any car without a warrant of some kind—in any State—and whether he has the authority to arrest a person riding in the car if a loaded revolver is found in it—in any State.

Personally, if I go on a trip, I consider the car my home, and I am going to carry a loaded revolver in it if I want to, for the same reason I keep one in my home.

Another Southerner.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Won't you allow a regular subscriber to The Post to comment on the remarks of one who signs himself "Southerner," of Alexandria, Va.? I question whether he is any more of a Southerner than a former Senator of Montana who years ago at a Republican meeting became so irate that he stopped the band from playing "Dixie." Your writer, incidentally, is a Georgia Cracker whose father fought under Gen. Beauregard in the Civil War.

There is no leadership forced on the South that could possibly cause disgust to white Southerners. We of the South know who should vote and, as my good friend, Senator Bilbo, so ably explained in the Senate the other day, we make no bones about it. The whole country applauds the courage of the Southern Senators in their present fight. Happily, the principle they are fighting for is now all but won.

More On England And America.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I, with many others, be permitted to thank "Eighth Generation American" for the views expressed in the communication headed "England and America."

In the present upset and perilous condition of the world it seems inexpressibly sad and shortsighted for Senators to be deliberately stirring up (and with no ground for so doing) a hatred toward England.

These Senators should know that if Japan conquers China that will not be the end of her conquest. If England goes down, the United States in the end falls with her and so—the end of civilization. For one of our Senators to state that England wants our co-operation solely for selfish reasons because she has large money interests in China is untrue.

Why is it that so many cannot get away from the childish and absolutely wrong impression that England is our enemy, when she is our strongest ally and the only one to whom we can turn in time of trouble, and from whom we have inherited all that is best in law and tradition.

ANOTHER AMERICAN OF MANY GENERATIONS.

Washington, Feb. 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I believe "Eighth Generation American" has misread history.

The United States never assumed theoretically or otherwise any debt of the Confederate States of America. The rebel States were admitted to the Union under an arrangement that forgave their debts, as States, and absolved the national Government of the United States from any debt incurred by the C. S. A.

I had officer ancestors in both U. S. Army and C. S. Army.

I, too, come from British stock. Moreover, I know Great Britain (I have been to England nine times). But, for my part, keep her on the other side of the Atlantic, where she belongs.

SEVENTH GENERATION AMERICAN.

Washington, Feb. 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reading the contributions of your correspondents under the general caption "Relations of England and America," it occurs to me that if one insists upon rummaging through the trunks of history to try to even up our shortcomings with those of England and France, let us rummage further, where we will find the case of our own American forefathers, who, as a minority, were taxed without representation by an English majority, and would still be, if this stalwart little body of men had not abandoned themselves, with a faith and moral courage founded not on their ancestry, but on their personal trust in God, to a war for independence.

During 15 years' residence in countries of Europe, the writer has had the privilege of viewing on the spot various reactions of different nations at crucial moments of their relationships with America. Rest assured that the debt which the bankrupt Confederacy was unable to pay after the Civil War was played up in all its colors not alone in France but in other French-speaking countries as well at the time when France first defaulted on her contracted debts.

If we wish to moralize by declaring that the Northern States "theoretically" took over the debts of the South, why not endow our moral outlook with a greater profundity and say that if our forefathers ever did owe anything to either England or France, it was paid back over and above, packed down and in good measure, by our present generation, which, to a man, sacrificed life, money and materials to win their war for them. Our paramount motive in entering the war was a humane one.

Is it not enough that the present generation of Americans repaid foreign debts during the war, without our further having to meekly submit to default on a post-war debt in our moment of suffering and distress, when such an obligation was contracted by written agreement?

FULL-BLOODED AMERICAN.

Civil Service Efficiency.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In his repeated statements that the merit system is superior to the spoils, Congressman Ramspeck, chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, indulges too much in platitudes and does not furnish factual evidence in support of his allegations.

This writer after nearly 20 years' experience in civil service as a critical observer of actual practice under the absurd grading of work probably is better informed than even a politician or legislator who derives his information second-hand. Merit is the name given to the method of choosing civil service employes on the basis of an intelligence test according to methods prescribed by the Civil Service Commission. This is the beginning, not the end, for once in the service merit may be overruled by favoritism and malpractice.

The Brookings Institution has pointed out that per capita income in the District of Columbia, irrespective of income from property, is higher than any State in the Union. In 1932 an expert statistician of Columbia University in his book, "Who Gets the Money," gave the average annual income of employes on government pay rolls—Federal, State, county and municipal—as nearly $1,800 while for the same period the average annual income of doctors, lawyers and architects was $1,170. Since 1932, 15 per cent has been added to the same income of Federal employes in the U. S. civil service.

When boasting of efficiency in the civil service and the merit system it should be borne in mind that a very large proportion of civil service personnel entered service during the World War and in the early days of the New Deal; in the former case the qualification test was almost nil, and in the second case there was no examination at all. The mention of efficiency in Government service gives me nausea. Imagine persons who entered civil service as file clerks or typists becoming senior auditors and assigned to work supposed to require a legal education.

How many Congressmen know of the vast number of persons with no more than high-school educations who are receiving from $2,000 to $3,500 a year and who in commercial organizations could not command $1,000 a year. Out of the vast number of unemployed university graduates almost every civil service position could be filled with a highly competent person.

Feeding Hungry Children.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was very much amused at the expression of one of the members of the local school board, who vigorously opposed going before the District Commissioners to request funds to feed hungry school children, saying that he was opposed to "any further extension of socialism."

Was there not a few years ago a Washington high school teacher who lost his job because he won a prize for the best definition of socialism given by one of the big magazines? Why not have the board member hunt out that bright teacher and ask him what socialism really is. Or, perhaps, if they have a dictionary in the board's library, he might look for the definition there.

Certainly I and thousands of others in Washington are not socialists, but we do believe in feeding hungry little tots. Certainly such action is not at all "radical" and thoroughly in accord with Christian principles.

Tub Reading.

IT has often occurred to me that the influence of the bathtub on American culture offers a rich field for research that too long has been neglected. Do not misunderstand me, I am not arguing that baths stimulate thought. On the contrary, warm baths make me sleepy, while cold baths make me think, true, but only of getting the hell out of there.

The tub is important, not as a thought stimulant, but as a literary refuge where one may usually read in peace. In my opinion there is more contented and thoughtful reading done in the American bathtub than in all the libraries of the country. The interesting thing is that because this reading is done in the tub, certain types of books are more apt to be read than others.

It is not my intention to exhaust the subject, however, but only, by recounting certain personal experiences, to indicate the role the tub may play in the education of many persons.

My earliest experience of this kind dates back to the G. A. Henty stage of my reading. At that time my legs were long and supple and I loved to read lying on my stomach with a slice of bread and peanut butter alongside to fortify me for the adventures of the book. The position was perfect for comfort, but one sure to remind every beholder of errands to be run or chores to be done.

This persecution drove me to seek sanctuary in the bathtub. For a time it was rumored that a sweetheart caused this sudden passion for cleanliness. But, while the family was thus deceiving and amusing itself at my expense, I absorbed the Henty books, the "Three Musketeers" series, and as many as four baths a day.

Followed a period of adolescent atheism when I dipped with many secret thrills into the American Mercury, Ingersoll, Schopenhauer and a tiny blue book entitled "Contradictions of the Bible." These were books that I brought home concealed under my coat to be read only behind a locked door. And the bathroom had the only dock in the house.

At the same time I enjoyed an attack of romanticism whose audible manifestations likewise drove me to the tub. There was no God but Omar, and I was His subject. Accompanied by the liquid tones of the faucet, imitating in a minor way Demosthenes talking back to the sea, I read aloud the Rubaiyat. I memorized its quotable quatrains and achieved a speaking and often spoken knowledge of its various editions.

Now the Rubaiyat might have been read elsewhere, but not Vachel Lindsey's "Congo." My voice was then changing, and the newly acquired bass rang pleasantly in my ears. Again and again I followed the marginal directions and roared, whispered or moaned the words of the poem. And again I needed the protection of a locked door.

My aquatic studies were interrupted by a bootless and intellectually arid stay at college. A boarding house bathtub, even at an easy-going Southern school, is too busy and important a fixture for prolonged reading. Moreover, the texts were too large and heavy to hold conveniently. But soon after I left college to battle the world in its natural habitat, I reverted to the dilatory and studious bathing of boyhood.

Now for the first time, when there were no longer moral restrictions to indicate the books I should read, I made a study of the field and discovered there are certain limitations the bathtub book should observe:

First, it should be light so that one does not tire while holding it.

Second, the book should be small in size. This allows it to be held in one hand. Though magazines are small and light, they are not of the best bathtub literature, since the limberness of their backs often causes them to buckle.

Third, the book should be printed on a cheap, porous, rather than an expensive paper. This forestalls a great loss if the volume slips. And, besides, the steam from the water does not moisten the blotter-like paper of a cheap book, while it corrugates and sticks together the glazed pages of an expensive volume.

As to the content, that, of course, must depend upon the reader. The most successful book, however, is one that can be opened any place and found interesting. This keeps the reader from having to use both hands (a strain in the tub) in finding his place. And, further, the book should be one that can be conveniently laid aside after a short time. When the water begins to chill there is no time for the finishing of a chapter.

These limitations may be ignored, or circumvented, but not easily. Heavy books may be read by using a board to support them. And Marat even, when he received the fatal visit from Charlotte Corday, was sitting in a tub shaped like a shoe, the top of which served as a desk for both reading and writing. But these artifices defeat their own end. To employ them one must sit up straight and that takes away half the pleasure of bathing.

No, the perfect bathtub book is one that can be read from a recumbent position with only the head and one hand out of the water. This not only gives a maximum of comfort, but also a maximum exposure of the body to the water. And, after all, that is one of the purposes of bathing. STANLEY DISNEY.

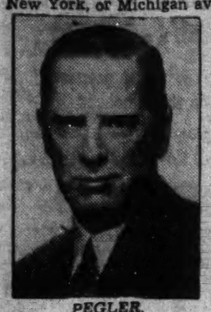
Profitable Addresses.

Chicago.

MOST BUSINESSMEN and certainly all renting agents appreciate the commercial value of a good address. Mere desk room in a building on Park avenue, New York, or Michigan avenue, Chicago, for example, may be preferable to a whole floor of a fairly serviceable building in a region of factories and tenements.



PEGLER.

Even a telephone and mail address in one of the preferred locations, for the purpose of some activities, not necessarily questionable, is worth the price of an office, solo, in a region of less prestige. There have been cases in which a lessee would take in many absentee or nominal tenants or roomers, each with his own telephone listed in the book and the name of his enterprise lettered on the door, and show himself a profit above the rent.

A famous name also has its value in some lines of business, notably journalism and insurance. In other days a famous or even an infamous name of sufficient notoriety was worth a premium for a short career in vaudeville or the moving pictures, but the amusement business regarded this as an unethical evil and has put up a firm resistance on the ground of unfair competition.

* * * *

REGULAR insurance men used to complain of unfair competition from famous athletes who would retain their amateur standing while exploiting their fame as insurance salesmen. Back in the era of wonderful nonsense a noted athlete with a man's-sized thirst and a change of dude flannels could set out for a tour of the winter resorts with hardly a dollar, spend the whole winter, and very little else, besides playing the society resorts, and return to his base in the spring with a book full of insurance business.

Real estate boomers would induce the athlete to drop in casually, knock over a few saucers of wine with their prospective customers in the cool of the evening, wrestle the customers' old ladies and daughters around the dance floor a few hours and play an exhibition match or tournament on their property.

The amateur could not accept actual pay for this service, but there was nothing to prevent his selling the boomer a large bill of goods in the insurance line. Such insurance salesmen were known as moochers, and their business was called moochery. But although the insurance people and the guardians of the purity of amateur sports were incensed, they could do nothing about it. It was merely a question of propriety.

Politicians, of course, are the last group to which one may look for propriety.

STATESMEN argue that those who are near and dear to them and understand them best are able to serve them best as secretaries and advisers. The public, nevertheless, showed its disapproval in an election a few years ago, following a series of articles by Raymond Clapper which showed what an enormous aggregate of pay was being collected by the relatives of Senators and Representatives. Many of those whom Mr. Clapper named were turned back by their constituents that year.

Insurance men object to the competition offered by relatives of persons in influential public office and by their relatives. C. A. Berger, president of the Insurance Brokers' Association of Illinois, in an article published a few weeks ago referred to this when he wrote: "Attention of the State and local governments has been called repeatedly to the evil and illegality of permitting their employes to engage in the sale of insurance to persons who obviously would be injured financially unless they went along with the boys."

Mr. Berger should know his subject, but what can the State do if some relative of a high public official, whose name is synonymous with political influence and power, offers to write insurance for persons who think they might be injured financially unless they go along with the boys?

It is all a matter of propriety and ethics. Some statesmen are ethical and some content themselves with criticizing the ethics of others.

But to return to the matter of a desirable business address, how much money do you suppose the country could collect by offering for sale to all comers for private business uses a telephone and mail address at the White House, Washington, D. C.?

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

A Small Businessman Gets Home.

Wife—Well, what happened?

Businessman—Boy, did I tell 'em! Did I give 'em the works!

Wife—Did you see the President?

Businessman (furtively)—Er, well, no.

Wife—I thought that was what you went to Washington for?

Businessman—He was seen only by a committee and I guess Roper wasn't sure of me.

Wife—Was it an exciting meeting?

Businessman—The best since the Rose Bowl battle.

* * * *

Wife—It sounded very disorderly in the newspaper accounts. What was all the shouting for?

Businessman—Well, Roosevelt always said the small businessman should have a bigger voice in affairs, didn't he?

* * * *

Wife—If those big businessmen like Owen Young and Mr. Sloan could behave so quietly in a Washington conference, why couldn't the small businessmen?

Businessman—My only explanation of that is that those big fellows must like pantomime performances.

Wife—Those big businessmen went in as quietly as mice and came out the same way.

Businessman—Yes, but we little fellows thought we had been mice long enough.

* * * *

Wife—Why couldn't you all be polite and orderly the way they were?

Businessman—Say, honey, those big fellows are crazy if they think that in a fight like this the rules can be found in the "Book of Etiquette." It's time for plain speaking.

Wife—But there's a difference between plain speaking and plain yelling. And why did you all have to yell at once?

Businessman—For the last eight months we've been yelling separately without getting any answer!

* * * *

Wife—I saw the list of recommendations you all made to the President. They sounded pretty strong.

Businessman—Dearie, you should have seen 'em before they were censored, dry-cleaned and put in refined language!

Wife—You talk like a football player.

Businessman—Why not? We small fellows have been kicked around so long we feel like football players!

Wife—Well, now that it's all over, do you think you'll get what you want?

Businessman (sadly)—No, and I doubt if we get what they want.

There is one thing about the housing bill that cramps the style of most Americans: it doesn't provide for any loan on one of those de luxe trailers.

Jim Farley is writing a book. They say he can't dicide between the title "Is There a Life After Roosevelt?" and "How to Win Friends and Almost Hold Gratitude."

Hitler's New Move

By S. Miles Bouton.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

IT IS but a few months since Adolf Hitler promised the world that there would be no more "surprises." Now he takes over supreme command of the armed forces of the Third Reich and makes himself absolute dictator of its foreign relations. Army generals are dismissed, diplomatic representatives recalled. What does it all mean? There are so many facets to the situation, there is so much behind the scenes that cannot be known to anyone outside the immediate circle of the highest Nazi officials, that only two points stand out clearly:

This sudden purge of the army and the Foreign Office brings war appreciably nearer.

It means also that the Nazi state is torn by internal dissension—that all brave talk about the "unity of the Germans behind their self-appointed Fuehrer cannot conceal the fact, known to every informed observer, that there is already a formidable and rapidly growing opposition to Nazi rule, and that this opposition extends to the army.

Three and a half years ago Ernst Roehm, commander of the Storm Troopers, was murdered, and 1,000 others with him, at the demand of the same army which now finds itself purged and subjected to the supreme command of a man who never rose higher in the World War than soldier of the first class, although he served from the first to the last day. Virtual second in command, placed over veteran generals who were division or corps commanders in the war, is a man who never commanded more than a small squadron of airplanes.

The dismissal—or forced resignation—of Gen. von Blomberg because he married a woman of lowly birth is unimportant in itself. The officers' corps would approve that; indeed, it is reported to have insisted on his retirement. But it will not approve the summary dismissal of officers who have merited better treatment. it will not approve the importing of partisan politics into the army.

Disinterest In Politics Characteristic Of Army.

IN NO ARMY is the esprit du corps higher than in the German army. This is a legacy from the Prussian army. The other legacy is complete disinterestedness in political affairs. That has always been so. Another characteristic of the German army has always been, at least outwardly, adherence to the Christian religion. The belt buckles of the soldiers bear the motto, "Gott mit uns" (God with us), religious field services are a regular part of army life.

It has been known for a year and more that there was deep resentment in army circles against the anti-Christian and pagan propaganda of the Nazi leaders, who, despite their mendacious assertions to the contrary, are determined to root out the Christian religion utterly, and whose efforts have already resulted in a pagan movement believed to have at least 5,000,000 adherents. One report says that Gen. von Fritsch, one of the chief victims of the new purge, some time ago summarily closed a meeting at which Alfred Rosenberg, Nazi official "philosopher," began an attack on the Christian church. The report can very well have been true; high German officers have never been pagans.

Baron von Neurath, dismissed Minister of Foreign Affairs, remains in the new cabinet, but it is unlikely that he will have much to say. His disappearance and the disappearance of Gens. von Blomberg and von Fritsch is especially disquieting, because it was they who, when a German cruiser was bombed by a loyalist Spanish airplane last year, succeeded after long hours of expostulation in keeping a hysterical, weeping Hitler from declaring war on the loyalists. To whom also is credited the fact that but few German soldiers, compared with the tens of thousands of Italians, have been sent to Spain.

It is no secret that the army is not only averse to any participation in the Spanish conflict, but also that it has viewed the Rome-Berlin axis with a jaundiced eye from the beginning. German strategists have no illusion about the military power of Italy. They have also no illusion about the military power of the nations that would be aligned against Germany in the coming conflict.

The crippling of their power can well mean Germany's increased intervention in Spain. It probably will mean just that. And if it does, it can be predicted without much hesitation that France will see herself compelled to open her border officially for arms and volunteers for the legitimate Spanish government.

Von Ribbentrop's Rise Stresses Colonial Demands.

THE APPOINTMENT of Joachim von Ribbentrop, former champagne salesman, as Foreign Minister is a puzlzing move. Reports from Germany insist that he is a clever diplomat, but thus far it is difficult to see on what achievements the estimate is based. He has been singularly unsuccessful as Ambassador to Great Britain; indeed, he succeeded only in displaying a tactlessness impressive even for a Prussian. He is credited, to be sure, with making the Rome-Berlin axis a reality—but it isn't a reality; it is 99 per cent bluff, as events will demonstrate.

That his appointment as Foreign Minister means an intensifying of Germany's demands for the return of her former calonies is virtually certain. But it is equally certain that all the attendant circumstances of this February purge make it, in higher degree than ever before, impossible for the mandatory powers to accede to them. There was a little chance before that such a demand would or could be granted. There should be none now, when all the moderate elements of the Nazi government have been sent away and replaced with radicals, including some fanatics.

Berlin correspondents report that Gen. von Fritsch was temporarily arrested. This is another indication of the growing dissatisfaction in the army with Nazi rule. But other indications were not required. The German army has always been, as it were, a state within a state. It is to be remembered that the officers' corps exacted what amounted to an apology from the Nazi government for its charges against Gen. von Schleicher, who was murdered with his wife in the June, 1934, purge.

The replacing of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, Germany's greatest economist and financial authority, by the rotund Walther Funk, is a further indication of coming events. Schacht resigned because he would no longer accept responsibility for the steady demolition of Germany's economic structure to buy cannons instead of butter. Funk, a former journalist, will have no such qualms. Shorter rations, heavier taxes and lower incomes face the masses of the people. Thus also the menace of war comes nearer.

Events Inject Resentment Into Vital Ranks Of Army.

THERE IS, however, one encouraging factor in the situation. It brings into the army the same resentment that already marked millions of civilians who have seen themselves reduced to virtual slavery, their standard of living lowered, their country isolated politically, financially and morally in the civilized world. Despite their muzzled press and radio, despite the savage punishments visited on critics of the government, they know in what disregard their government stands.

A few weeks ago I had a long talk with a friend who, after spending almost a quarter of a century in Germany, returned a few years ago, and went back last year for a stay of seven months. He has acquaintances and friends in all parts of the country, and his wife is a German woman whose relatives were not afraid to talk with him. He asserted that not 10 per cent of the German people were behind the Nazi government. I finally succeeded in getting him to raise it to 20 per cent, but higher he would not go.

One statement which he repeatedly heard in confidential talks was: "When the next war comes, we shall know what to shoot at." My own private advices from Germany have in the last months reported the same or similar statements a half dozen times—twice from soldiers. It is a significant fact that disrespectful stories about Hitler are heard much oftener.

It reports that Goering and Goebbels, motoring through the country, ran over a dog in front of a peasant's house. Goering went into the house to report the accident, while Goebbels waited in the auto. Some ten minutes later Goering reappeared, his arms full of sausages, a hen and other good things. Goebbels was astounded.

"What happened?" he asked. "Wasn't the peasant sore when you told him we had killed his dog?"

"Not at all," said Goering. "I went in, raised my arm, and said, 'Heil, Hitler! The dog is dead,' and they insisted on giving me all this food."

That the coming war will be stopped, as far as Germany is concerned, by a revolution is much likely. That is the one ray of hope more than possible. It is highly illumining an otherwise depressing situation.

Red China

By Barnet Nover

The First Authentic Story.

WHEN THE PRESENT FIGHTING in China began, eight months ago, few expected China to hold out as long and as well as she has. The presumption was that this time, as in 1931-32, Chiang Kai-shek and the Nanking government would, after a face-saving show of resistance, make peace with the Japanese on terms satisfactory to the latter. This would have meant, of course, openly or tacitly agreeing to the alienation of still another stretch of Chinese territory. But that had been done repeatedly since 1931 and there appeared to be no reason why it should not happen again.

* * * *

IN HIS SUPERB and path-breaking book, which he finished some time before the fuse of the present undeclared war was lit at the Marco Polo Bridge, Edgar Snow shows why such presumptions were, this time, out of order. Something had happened in far-off Sian in December, 1936, which in very dramatic fashion revealed the changed state of affairs in China. The kidnaping of Chiang Kai-shek on the eve of what was about to be his sixth or seventh anti-Red campaign, not only marked a dramatic turning point in the generalissimo's career, it also marked what may prove to be the beginning of a new cycle in Chinese history. For out of the truce between Nanking and the Chinese Soviet Republic of the northwest which followed the Sian episode, came a bridging of the split in the Chinese nationalist movement that had occurred ten years earlier. The cement was common opposition to further encroachments on China by the Japanese militarists.

It was hardly surprising that, so far as the outside world was concerned, it took a long time before the significance of the Sian episode became clear. Upon Chiang Kai-shek the spotlight had played for years. But practically nothing was known of the Chinese Reds, their army and their government. Insofar as the world was at all aware of their existence it was taken for granted that they represented but an arm of the Comintern, financed, equipped and led by Russians. This happened to be precisely what the Japanese wanted the world to believe. But it was also precisely what the Nanking government, which had spent much manpower and treasure in trying to wipe out its Red opponents, wanted the world to believe.

* * * *

MR. SNOW has now, for the first time, made clear beyond question how far from the truth was any such easy assumption regarding the Chinese Soviet regime. He is in a position to do so, for he was the first outsider to penetrate the region in northwest China which the Reds had taken over and which they ruled.

It proved no easy task. It took a lot of courage to undertake what was practically a voyage into the unknown. But Mr. Snow was well rewarded for his pains He emerged from his experience with the first authentic story of one of the most amazing adventures in history, the long march of the Red Army from south central China to the northwest—a march that makes Xenophon's Anabasis a pink tea party by comparison and the exploits of the Czech legion, in moving from the Ukraine to the Pacific in the war-torn Russia of 1918, a tourist trip.

Altogether the Chinese Reds traversed a distance of close to 9,000 miles. They did so without any means of transportation except shank's mare. And throughout the march they were constantly harassed by well-equipped armies in alliance with Nanking. That they survived at all is a miracle. But it is a miracle explainable on two grounds. In the first place the Red leaders such as Mao Tse-tung, Chu Teh, Lin Piao are, from Snow's description, men of real ability. And, secondly, in every area they touched they managed to win the support of the peasants.

The methods of guerrilla warfare which they have so successfully employed are expounded in four slogans:

When the enemy advances we retreat!

When the enemy halts and encamps, we trouble them!

When the enemy seeks to avoid a battle, we attack!

When the enemy retreats, we pursue.

* * * *

BY THE END OF 1935, that is months after the fifth and presumably "final" anti-Communist campaign of Chiang Kai-shek, a Chinese Soviet regime had been set up in the northwest. "Whatever it may have been in the south," says Snow, "Chinese Communism, as I found it in the northwest, might more accurately be called rural equalitarianism than anything Marx would have found agreeable as a model child of his own." Mr. Snow goes into great detail in describing the set-up, civil and military and social. His book is encyclopedic in its scope. It is an adventure story, a travelogue, a history, a Who's Who in Red China, a careful study of political institutions all in one. His sympathies are clearly with the Reds. But that does not in the least diminish the value of his work which, as a reporting job alone, is worthy of the highest commendation.

New Deal No. 1

By W. L. Schurz

THE SUBTITLE of Dr. Hanson's book is "Chapters in the Economic History of Uruguay." More provocative for American readers are the words on the jacket: "An Analysis of the First New Deal in the Americas." If it had been written by a journalist, instead of by a professor of economics, and if Uruguay were in Europe, instead of in South America, it would probably be as sensational a success as Marquis Child's "Sweden: The Middle Way." Anyway, it should be required reading for all New Deal executives and for anyone who has a serious interest in social legislation.

Before President Roosevelt took office in 1933, this tight little country, with a population—and a budget—slightly less than Louisiana's, had nearly all the features of our New Deal. By the use of public corporations, which in 20 years showed a profit of $100,000,000, it had entered the field of private business to an extent undreamed of by the present Administration. It had a state insurance department, which sold life and fire policies. It packed meat, manufactured alcohol, ran filling stations, and operated fishing trawlers. It had a monopoly of electric light and power long before TVA; it loaned money to farmers before the FCA was ever heard of, and money for building homes before there was an FHA or a USHA. It had an 8-hour day, minimum wage laws, state medicine, and an elaborate social security system.

Most of this was the work of a very remarkable man, Jose Batlle y Ordonez, twice President of his country. Some of it has not worked and much of it has had to be overhauled to make it workable. But the essentials remain, to make Uruguay one of the most interesting laboratories of democracy in the world. As Dr. Hanson all too modestly puts it, "That a South American country should have conceived an ideal of state-owned and operated industry, proceeded to a considerable fulfillment of that program, and achieved a large measure of success, is significant and well worth investigation."

"UTOPIA IN URUGUAY," by Simon G. Hanson (Oxford University Press, $3.50).

Tom McCarthy

Fight Night.

"KILL HIM," the crowd yelled, and you could hear it back in the dressing room.

But nobody seemed to pay much attention, and none of them mentioned their stomachs. None of them mentioned the way they felt, the way their stomachs got tied up in knots, and the things they thought about, or tried not to think about, when they heard the crowd yelling, "Kill him, kid."

McCARTHY.

Most of them had had that feeling. They knew what it was to feel a fist, in an eight-ounce glove, or less, sink into the belly. They knew what it was to stand up against a guy that the sports writers said was good and feel his round-house blows bouncing off the head. They knew the sick feeling and the tiredness which made them drop their guard in the last round, with the other guy's fists bouncing off their face.

But they didn't say much about it. They didn't even think out the things they were going to do. They didn't dare think out the things like, "I'm going to club this bird unconscious in the first two rounds," or "I hope I can last it . . . all the way!"

Little Mike Morton, who has a Jewish face, and the naiveness of a kid about him, came as close as any of them to saying what he felt. He had his mouthguard in when he said it, and the rubber tooth protector made his words come out strangely.

"Shee wish," he said, "I wish thish thing wash over. I afraidsh I'll neversh be a big timesh fisher. I gesh too nervesh waitin.'"

Little Mike was in the third bout of the evening at Turner's Arena and he was nervous.

"Gosh," he said, his words distorted by the tooth protector, "I'm afraish I'll never be bigsh time. I getsh too nervesh." Then he tapped Georgie Abrams, who fights at 155, on the shoulder with his glove. And he got up and danced around.

Georgie just sat there with a quiet expression on his face, and he didn't show much emotion.

"I'm glad I don't have to watch Mike fight," he finally said. "I'd get nervous . . . I'd blow up."

* * * *

IT'S A FUNNY room. It's the dressing room at Turner's Arena. It's the room where the fighters dress before their Monday night bouts. And they go out of the room, looking like little kings, very sleek in their shorts, and well formed in their bodies. And usually they've got their hair brushed back slick, because when it's long or wild it hits them in the forehead like a whip. Particularly, when they're sweating hard and the fight is tough, and they get roughed up a bit.

It's a little room and it stinks of sweat. And there's a shower on the left as you come in, and on the other side of a thin partition are the remaining bathroom facilities. And there are benches along the right side, the end and the left side, and a table at the end of the room with adhesive tape strung from it in various lengths for fixing up the bandages on the fighters' hands.

And they sit there and hear the crowd yelling, "Kill him." And hear the crowd yelling "Stop the fight," and they know what that means, even if they don't like to think about it.

They know that some poor punk, without training, is taking it. They know that fists are sinking into his belly and bounding off his jaw and that he's leading with his chin. They know that he can hardly see, and that he's bleeding and that the crowd is yelling.

Then they get up and dance around. That is, some of them do.

* * * *

ON THE bench along the left side of the room sat Nick Camarata, a slick lightweight. His hair was polished back slickly and he sat there in a bathrobe with his hands between his knees. And the crowd outside was yelling at one of the preliminary fights, "Kill him." And Nick sat there very quietly until it came time for his bout. Then he got up and shadowboxed and jumped up and down testing his legs.

And the very dark Puerto Rican, Cristabol Jaramillo, whom he was going to fight, sat on the opposite side of the room saying nothing and looking very stern. When Jaramillo got in the ring he clowned around and threw his long arms wide when the referee told him to break. Generally he dramatized it. But in the dressing room he sat very still, and looked very solemn.

"We meet each other when he weigh in," Georgie Abrams said, pointing to Ben Wojack, the big fellow he was to beat badly that night. "But we don't talk much."

* * * *

SO THEY just sat there waiting for their fight. And they didn't feel any hatred toward the guys they were going to fight. And when the fight was good, and they won, they were going to say "he was plenty tough."

And then, though they looked like little kings in the ring, they were going to climb into cheap suits, ask their managers for some dough and go out with the boys and talk it over, not looking at all like little kings whom Senators had been cheering, but like little guys that, maybe, deliver the groceries from the corner store.

And when they squatted over a beer later they wouldn't place any importance on the guy that walked into the room between bouts, his lips moving strangely and his hands jerking back and forth, and him balancing strangely on his heels.

Even then they would merely admit that he'd been a great fighter in his day but that now he was punch-drunk. And they would'nt see much relation between his trembling arms and their own strong ones. He'd just got hit too much. But that would never happen to them!

Tydings Fights For New Bridge In D. C. Budget

Restoration of Pennsylvania Span in Bill Seen Likely.

Prospects for restoration of the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge in the District supply bill were increased yesterday as Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, addressed an appeal to the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations.

Tydings, an ex-officio member of the sub-committee, said he would fight to include the $650,000 appropriation recommended by the Budget Bureau, although he would not attempt to hold up the bill.

A supplemental estimate of $400,000 to build a 15,000,000-gallon reservoir on the Soldiers Home grounds was submitted to the Senate yesterday by the Budget Bureau as Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, opened hearings.

The reservoir estimate, which had been held up by the Budget Bureau pending conclusion of a deal between the District Government and the Soldiers Home, will increase the budget total but not the anticipated deficit, as the $400,000 will come out of a $653,811 water fund surplus.

"Dangerous Demand."

D. W. Bell, acting budget director, in submitting the supplemental estimate, said the increase in water consumption in the first high service area of the city has been so great it has imposed a dangerous demand on the McMillan and Bryant plants.

A variety of controversial issues were discussed by District officials at yesterday's budget hearing, but no decisions were reached, according to Senator Thomas.

Police Court judges revived the fight over jurisdiction in the new Police Court Building and asked the Senate sub-committee to restore the authority to them.

Chairman Collins of the House sub-committee declared on the House floor, however, that the provision in the 1938 act had not been held permanent law by the General Accounting Office.

Senator Thomas indicated that if the sub-committee makes any additions of capital improvements to the bill, such as the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, it also will make corresponding reductions in order to keep the total at approximately the amount recommended by the House sub-committee.

Items May Be Deleted.

That may mean the Thomas Circle underpass, the K street overpass and other items added by the Collins sub-committee to the Budget Bureau estimates will be deleted.

Fire Chief Charles Schrom appeared before the sub-committee and asked an additional $10,000 for the department garage in order to repair old fire-fighting equipment.

During the morning session the sub-committee questioned officials of the electrical department regarding complaints of long delays in making inspections of electrical wiring.

One complaint, it was said, was that inspections had not been made until 12 years after the required fees were collected by the District.

I Wanted Peace, Moans Buck Baker From Maryland Haven.

The nerve of it, said Buck Baker, retired circus clown, of Brentwood, Md. Buck Baker was sore, completely beside himself. He had just finished reading a letter from the New York World's Fair people, asking him to board, lodge and train 85 midgets. "I won't do it," said Buck Baker; I'll head 'em off. I don't want 85 midgets out here. I don't want one midget. I want to retire. I want peace."

"Peace," repeated Baker. At the moment all four of his canaries started singing; his three dogs started barking; Old Bill, the 12-year-old goose, started a fight with Old Red, the 7-year-old duck; his dummy that looks like Charlie McCarthy, caught the inflamed echoes and started alternately singing, quacking, barking and saying "I don't want no midgets."

"And no, I don't want any midgets," reaffirmed Buck Baker. "I've been with Ringling Brothers and worked under 11 other big tops . . . I rode a bicycle around the top of the smokestack when the powerhouse burned down near The Post Building, and I rode it eight days before the eyes of thousands in a colossal, stupendous act. I'm now 72, and I want peace; I don't want midgets. They want me to board, lodge and train 85 midgets . . . I'll head 'em off . . ."

Old Red, by this time, had won the fight, the canaries had stopped singing and the dogs weren't barking. The dummy was only echoing Buck Baker, who now was becoming coherent. "You see," he said:

"I quit the road in Texas last year, moved out here last November. I didn't want anymore. But somehow they heard about me, and what I knew about midgets. Now they write in here, a fellow signing his name Mr. Alvarez, and asks me to board 85 midgets.

"Now, what's he think I'm to do with 85 midgets? Twould take a barn to keep 'em in; a big tent or a hotel. I've got a yard full of things here now. I've got old Bill out there and all these children in the neighborhood to look after . . .

"You know, about 100 of those kids come after me every day, making me tell 'em how the fat lady got fat and how they saw people in half in the shows. And I have to tell of the time I rode the bicycle down the Capitol steps. When I'm not doin' all that I've got to separate that goose and the duck, or stop the canaries from singing too loud or holler at the dogs. And on top all that they want me to take 85 midgets. You reckon those folks gone crazy up there?" asked Buck Baker.

Again, Old Red was attacked by Old Bill, the dogs started barking at the excitement, the canaries started singing, the parrot started squawking and Buck Baker started crying, "Listen at it, and I wanted to retire in peace. They're going to send me 85 midgets. I'll head 'em off. I must head 'em off." And the dummy that looks like Charlie McCarthy echoed "Midgets, head 'em off, head 'em off!"

I'll Head 'Em Off, He Warns, and Dummy Echoes Him.

Spring Themes Are Appearing In Night Clubs

Helen Green Headliner Once More at King Cole Room.

By Chanticleer

Spring is in the air and local spots are answering the doctor's prescription with refreshing new attractions.

At the King Cole room, Miss Washington is back with new laurels from Broadway. This, of course, is Helen Green, who was at the King Cole room several months ago. She went to the Hollywood Restaurant as mistress of ceremonies and featured singer and comes back with a polished repertoire and some suave sophisticated songs. Incidentally you'll probably be seeing her in the movies soon, for she did a couple of shorts in New York.

The magic carpet at the Hotel Raleigh's Pall Mall stops tonight at Budapest. That romantic corner of the world should furnish some interesting atmosphere, plus some Hungarian rhapsodies and gypsy music. So if you have had a touch of wanderlust this music should give you a satisfying hour. The dance team, Billy Faye and Dolly Wellington, are held over from last week. They will, on request, give you tips on polishing up your "Big Apple" technique.

At the Madrillon, the bouquet of spring flowers goes to Johnny Shaw for reviving such old tunes as "Loch Lomond" into sparkling new arrangements. Promised in the future is "Martha." The mysterious blonde on their program the other night still remains a mystery, and those score of inquiries for name and telephone are still meeting disappointment.

"Well built!" was the comment of a certain newspaperman when he took one look at the Grecian adgio team of Orville Stam and Martha LaRue in the Shoreham's Blue Room.

Stam and LaRue are featured entertainers in the floor show twice nightly, where dance music is by Maxim Lowe's band, with Barnee directing.

The new leader at the Carlton Shar-Zad, Frank Gagen, bears a striking resemblance to William Powell, the movie actor, and has been on several occasions accosted by autograph seekers. His band came here from the Commodore Club in Detroit.

The new show at the Lotus brings from Roxy's in New York a team of sophisticated dancers and the Eight Miracle Girls of 1938. There is also the Maybank trio to do some fast stepping on the hardwood.

A stein number with novelty bells is opening attraction in the Winter Garden Revue at the Bamboo Gardens. This show, featuring Catherine Behney, includes such as the LeMunn sisters, Barries, Behney and Dunn, and Hammond and O'Friel.

The new orchestra leader at Brinkley's called in to say that the nationality was Irish, but he preferred it spelled with an "a" instead of an "o." O. K., Mr. McCaffrey, it shall be done. Incidentally, Brinkley's is great for a Scotchman, as there is no minimum or cover charge.

The Three M's are announcing to their friends that after their long engagement at the Ambassador's Hi-Hat, they will leave Washington soon.

Milt Davis' orchestra at the Rainbow Room has some special numbers for the Big Apple. If you wish to try out some new steps, send in your requests.

Maxine Tappan is on the approved list among Mayflower sophisticates. Her blonde beauty, vivid personality and voice are the reasons. Sidney announces some new arrangements of popular songs, including "Rosalie."

The Anchor Room still has the popular accordionist and vocalist, Ward Duval. He is psychic. If you doubt, ask him to play the tune you are thinking. It happened the other night, much to the consternation of a certain young lady.

For genuine Russian atmosphere and food, the Troika. There is dancing and you are bound to see at least one or two Senators or Representatives before you leave.

Entertainers at Night Spots

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Howard University School of Music presents Hugh Porter in an organ recital in Rankin Memorial Chapel. Program: Canzona (Gabrieli), Menuet in C (Mozart), old canzona by Giovanni Gabrieli, leur de nuit" (Bach-Widor), Chorale-Prelude, "My Soul Doth Magnify the Lord;" Adagio in F from Trio-Sonata, Prelude and Fugue in D major (Bach), Improvisation-Caprice (Jongen), Carillon (Delamarter), Roulade (Bingham), Carillon-Sortie in D (Mulet).

Hugh Porter, whose official console is in the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas in New York, gave an interesting recital last evening in the concert course of Howard University School of Music, building his program around a substantial nucleus of Bach. A skilled technician and a sensitive musician, he made the Rankin Chapel organ sound more eloquently than on any previous occasion when I have heard it, giving due allowance to the possibility that the recently installed instrument may be finding its voice.

He began his program with an in C; ingenious as the arrangement the pioneer experimenter in instrumental music, who died in 1612, while the organ was still in a rudimentary stage. This was followed by a piece which seemed misplaced in an otherwise judicious selection—a transcription of Mozart's Menuet in C; ingenious as thearrangement was, it had the air of feeling ill at ease in the wrong company. The opening group closed with one of the highly ornamented yet delightful set of Noels by Louis Claude Daquin, the contemporary of Rameau.

The Bach group was introduced by Widor's "Marche du veilleur de nuit," a short fantasia on one of the choralie-preludes. Its Gallic treatment might have amused the Leipzig cantor, who had a sense of humor. After that came straight Bach, excellenty played. Particularly clear in registration was the D major Preiude and Fugue, which is easily muddied by careless handling.

Contemporary composers were represented in the final group, which held the engaging Improvisation-Caprice by Joseph Jongen, an effective Carillon by Eric Delamarter, a brilliant Roulade by Bingham, and Mulet's sturdy Carillon-Sortie in D major. These pieces were performed with admirable dexterity and a fine sense of tonal values.

Group Health Unit Organized At Greenbelt

200 Join Co-operative at First Meet of Association.

More than 200 residents of Greenbelt last night organized the Greenbelt Co-operative Health Association—a project designed to care for their medical needs with a minimum of cost.

More than 100 applications for membership in the association were received. When 250 families have joined, a full-time doctor and nurse will be hired.

Plans call for an initial membership fee of $5. Receipts from that source will go toward equipping a medical center. In addition, each member family will pay $2 monthly for the medical service.

The $2 fee will provide treatment at the medical center. For home calls, a charge of 50 cents for the first call in each week will be exacted. Other calls in the week will be free.

Eventually, the association hopes to have three doctors—one for each 250 families—and two nurses. The first doctor to be engaged will be a general practitioner. The second and third will be a child specialist and an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist.

Member families will receive free obstetrical service, but an additional charge will be made for deliveries. The family rate of $2 includes medical services for the family up to the four-child limit allowed at Greenbelt.

Harry E. Hesse was elected chairman of a temporary board to manage the association. Others on the committee are John Beckman, Leo Miller, Arthur Dickerman, Mrs. Herkus Letkeman, Fred Wilde and Ed Thornhill. The directors expect to get activities nuder way within two weeks.

At another Greenbelt meeting last night, residents authorized Mike Lombardo, former Maryland University boxer and now director of WPA recreational projects in Prince Georges County, to conduct a survey to determine recreational needs at the community.

Freight Rate Boost Called Temporary Aid

Wheeler Says 15 Per Cent Increase Would Be Only 'Palliative.'

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, expressed the view last night that an increase in railroad freight rates would be only a "temporary palliative" to the roads.

The railroads have petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission for a 15 per cent boost.

A "conservative" econimist once declared railroad profits were greatest when rates were lowest.

Asserting that the future of the roads was not as "tragic as some predict," and that railroads were as indispensable now as 50 or 75 years ago, the Senator advocated:

Keeping total capitalization down to earning value in lean years.

Low debt and interest charges.

Abolishment of the surplus tax to permit setting up of sinking funds with which to pay bonded indebtedness.

Tightening of the law regulating railroad expenditures for purchases of stock in other companies.

"Genuine" competitive bidding for equipment and supplies.

Elimination of "unnecessary" holding companies and non-operating affiliates and subsidiaries.

Giving the ICC the same access to records of bankers and brokers it has to records of the carriers.

Mammoth Whale Spouts Derision At Coastal Patrol

San Francisco, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—The whale of San Francisco Bay, a 60-foot barnacled gray-backed old fellow now nicknamed "Mopey Dick," reappeared today and played a game of hide-and-seek with four coastguard boats bent upon his destruction.

Guardsmen unlimbered guns to blow the 100-ton shipping menace into whale oil. Each time, Mopey spouted a 30-foot column of water distainfully and disappeared.

Red Mistress, Trained Falcon, On the Loose Over Washington

Red Mistress, a trained peregrine falcon, is lost, and her master, Alva G. Nye, jr., of 5406 Connecticut avenue northwest, is appealing to Washingtonians to help find her.

The peregrine falcon is the fastest bird in America, capable of doing 100 miles an hour on a straight-away and 180 to 200 when diving for a pigeon, a crow or a blackbird. If you see such a fast-moving bird, and if a leather leash is trailing behind, that will be Red Mistress.

One end of the leash slipped out of a swivel yesterday, and Red Mistress soared away on a private hunting expedition.

Ordinarily the hawk does her hunting for Nye, leaving his wrist at a command, bringing down her quarry and then returning to light on his wrist, just as felcons did for bluff King Henry VIII, and for the Egyptians thousands of years before that.

Nye became interested in falconry when he was a boy in Chevy Chase. A trip to the West Indies and South America with Dr. Paul Bartsch, of the Smithsonian Institution, heightened his interest.

Five years ago he went to Canada, determined to get a peregrine falcon. He found one, a fuzzy little thing, in a nest on the side of a cliff. She became Red Mistress. Nye trained her at a boys' summer camp in the Blue Ridge Mountains with the University of Pennsylvania.

Red Mistress had escaped three times before yesterday. On one occasion she went into a woman's apartment in Philadelphia. The janitor clapped her into a box, and Nye found her through the efforts of a radio announcer.

The peregrine falcon is a rare and valuable bird. From that standpoint her loss is a grievous one to Nye. But what really is worrying him is that Red Mistress, with her trailing leash, might be entangled in a tree and slowly starving.

Bowers Will Learn Fate in Court Today

Norristown, Pa., Feb. 8 (AP).—District Attorney Frederick B. Smillie, who said he personally "abhors" capital punishment, placed in the hands of three judges today the fate of Wendell Forrest Bowers, "marble-eyed" killer.

Defense counsel said Bowers was guilty of murder in the first degree in the slaying of Mrs. Wilma V. Carpenter. She was shot in her bedroom by an intruder the night of December 13.

In his final arguments to the court, which will determine the degree of guilt and fix the punishment, Smillie avoided mention of the electric chair.

Ross Estate Is $79,372.

U. S. Taxes Held Too Complicated

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—Simplification of the Federal revenue system by elimination of many consumption taxes and increased reliance upon income and estate levies were advocated tonight by Roswell Magill, Undersecretary of the Treasury.

"This very course of action, however, would be likely to result in more rather than less relief provisions in the income tax itself," Magill told the New York City Bar Association.

Oran, Algeria, Feb. 8 (AP).—Maurice Rossi, French transatlantic flier, today established a new world's speed record over a 2,000-kilometer (1.24-miles) course with a pay load of 2,000 kilograms (4,409 pounds).

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Woman, 28, Asks Why She Is Unmarried and Unable to Keep Suitors for Any Length of Time.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Why, at the age of 28, am I unmarried and unable to hold the interest of a suitor for any length of time? I am considered intelligent, and, though fun-loving, may be too intellectual at times. I am attractive enough and dress becomingly. I gargle every day and don't have dandruff. I have a career in which I am very much interested. I've thought at times I may be too independent with men. Usually I manage to let them know how well I can take care of myself. I know this is wrong, but I am never conscious of giving the impression until too late.

* * * *

Perhaps a specific illustration will show what I mean. For three months a young man called on me with increasing frequency, though rather casually. He told me he loved me, and I warned him not to, because I liked him too well to hurt him, and told him that since I did not love him he should not expect too much of me. But now I am gradually learning to love him more and more, though perhaps it will never be absolute as he is not in a position to marry and won't be for years. Recently I have submitted to his caresses and he has begun to stay away and to be a bit too casual about coming over. He knows I am growing fond of him.

* * * *

The past year has given both of us, in relation to others, a bitter experience with love. Both of us had been "left in the lurch," so to speak, although I doubt that he knows about my painful experience. He says he never tells a girl how much he cares for her. I know these thoughts are jumbled but it is an expression of my own confusion, I guess. If you can glean any understanding of my problem and give me any help, I shall appreciate it. Sincerely,

VINA.

Earmarks of Bore.

DEAR VINA: You lack verve, vitality, charm, zest, a lilting sense of humor, and that lack, probably more than anything else, explains why, at the age of 28, you are unmarried and unable to hold the interest of a suitor for any length of time. Your personality is probably dull, stuffy, monotonous, deadly serious—or so, at least, I gather from the foregoing presentation of your social assets and romantic vicissitudes.

* * * *

For instance, no girl with essential lightness of touch, who possessed a saving awareness of the ridiculous element in even the more trying aspects of life, could pen the sentence: "I gargle every day and don't have dandruff," and not laugh out loud at the sheer absurdity of such a negative claim of magnetism. And no girl with a gay capacity for spontaneous fun could ever be so painfully literal as to say without irony, "I have submitted to his caresses," in referring to a tender interchange between herself and her admirer. In short, you don't know the deliciously ridiculous when you see it or when you perpetrate it, and thereby convict yourself of being, to a considerable extent, a bore.

* * * *

Men like wit, gaiety, good humor, a kind of mental sparkle and resiliency in their women. You may have a certain intellectual reach, but you lack true social intelligence if you don't know how to invest your personality and your immediate environment with an impalpable suggestion of lighthearted understanding of yourself, and life, and men and emotions, that is closely akin to nature's sunshine.

* * * *

Probably the worst tactics you could employ when a man makes love to you, or says he loves you or claims he is falling in love with you, is to show a heavy-handed earnestness about attempting to save him from the consequences of his own folly. If he says he loves you, remark, "How wonderful," or "This is so sudden," or "Go on; this is music to my ears," or simply look starry-eyed and noncommittal. Never take a suitor's first declarations of love at face value, unless he is the shyest and ordinarily the most inarticulate of men, in which case common kindliness should prompt you to deal gently, tactfully and seriously with the admission.

* * * *

Take it for granted that love, or the possibility of love, or the constant imminence of a declaration of love, lies just beneath the surface of any man-and-woman relationship—which it does, as a rule. What is begun in fun sometimes develops into something earnest along these lines. As I once heard a man say, of just such denouements, "Sometimes we go to play and remain to pray." And, on the other hand, what sometimes starts with serious intent dwindles off into nothingnes. Therefore it is best to find out what the actual, fundamental pattern of the relationship is before attempting to give it objective form.

M. H.

Why Age Seems Penurious.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The other day there was a letter in your column from a young woman who complained that she and her sisters were supporting their mother and that she had been very much upset on learning that her mother had a bank account . . . I am an elderly woman myself and I think nothing could be more unendurable to me than to be dependent upon my children or anyone else.

* * * *

Old age is a dreary thing at best and to feel that one is grudgingly supported by one's children must be simply tragic. Why, then, should a daughter be so terribly shocked to find that her mother has been laying something by in case that little income she receives should eventually be denied her?

* * * *

As you reminded her, we frequently read of old persons who starved themselves to death while possessing ample funds. This, I think, is because the fear of pauperism and dependence has become an obsession and their minds, weakened by age and loneliness, are no longer able to reason intelligently. The older we grow, the more we realize that having a bit of money makes all the difference between one's being wanted and not wanted in this world.

* * * *

Now, of course, I don't think a mother should deprive her children of the necessities of life in order to feather her own nest, but I venture to say that in this particular case the mother is very anxious about her own future, knowing support may be withdrawn at any moment. She may even feel that her little savings will benefit her children after she is gone. If she had a considerable sum, that would put a different face on the matter, but such was not my impression . . . I'm frank to say that if I were in that mother's place I would hold on to my little bank account so that my children could never complain, among other things, about my burial cost.

4 tablespoons of ice cream
1 teaspoon of vanilla

Scald the milk in a double boiler. Add the finely ground coffee and sugar and allow to stand for 15 minutes. Strain and chill. When ready to serve, add the ice cream and vanilla and shake well.

New Sauce Idea.

Those who enjoy tartar sauce but dislike mayonnaise will like the effect of chopped ripe olives and sweet pickles blended in one of the ready prepared salad dressings with little oil content. Ripe olives contribute traditional richness with fewer calories.

Smoked Sailfish.

Sailfish, the fighting denizen of Miami, Fla., waters which lures sportsmen there from all parts of the world, makes an excellent cocktail savory when smoked and served on salted crackers. The delicacy is now on the market and can be obtained in the better class grocery and delicatessen stores.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Feb. 8.

ONE OF THE fascinating phenomena of the past few years, among the younger fry, has been the establishment of movie "fan clubs," all dedicated to devotion to the specific idol of the members. These idols never have clay feet, they can do no wrong, they are the absolute perfection no elder skeptic believes can exist in this daffy and malformed world.

ALICE HUGHES.

Young girls can start and foment this mass worship of screen godlets. They are the youngsters who collect photographs of the stars, keep scrapbooks and often correspond with the objects of their idolatry. Obviously, no picture company would lift an eyebrow to help these "clubs!" My mate, who once toiled spasmodically for the outfit which pays Fred Astaire his weekly insult, saw this business from the inside, and the red-headed president of Freddy's club, a Jersey lass, was a familiar office figure, getting out the mimeographed magazine of the doting sodality. With a Joan Crawford film on a big Broadway screen, Mrs. Tone's local soviet has burst, faintly, into the public eye.

Miss Marian Dommer, its 22-year-old prexy, hotly denies that the membership is moronic. They just love Joanie-woanie! The sorority gets out a magazine six times a year, under the patronage of the great Beverly Hills matron herself. Dues are 50 cents an annum, and Miss Dommer says it costs her $250 a year of her own to keep the budget balanced. Hear her!

* * * *

"She is the greatest personality in the world!" says Miss President. "We are not just movie fans—we are her friends." When asked if they would follow another star, such as Garbo, if Joan retired, the answer was no. "Maybe the club would," said Miss Dommer, "but I wouldn't. That would be the finish to me!" And need I add that her favorite actor is a man named Tone—Franchot Tone, I believe?

The utter devotion of thousands of young girls to a shadow on a screen is a wondrous thing. If swing music doesn't get them, a film star must.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Betty Lawford, the lovely blonde who for over a year has plunged into a tub of soap-bubbles for a scene in "The Women," has finally wearied of bubble—something for the cash customers, and has quit her job. She never caught cold, to be sure, but even such high art can ultimately become a blithering bore. Betty heads for Florida, and many suggest that the long courtship by Radio Pundit Ted Husing is about to culminate in a hike to the altar.

Waves of patriotism beat upon our famous Chinatown. The latest symptom from Mott and Pell streets is the news that the Chinese are going to give up their fancy New Year celebration, with its firecrackers and dragons, and send the funds to their embattled copatriots in the homeland.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Soliloquy of a Tired Businesswoman

When I was very young and trying unsuccessfully
To wash out each night my intimate apparel,
In the graceful, languorous manner
Of ladies pictured in advertisements of soap flakes,
I felt that my heart's greatest desire
Was a maid.
Someone to keep all my clothes spick and shining,
To remove spots from jabots, wrinkles from dresses,
To catch gloves with a stitch in time, heels before they were tilting,
To take tucks in slips that sagged at the sides, tighten on snappers,
In short, with a "Here, Marie," to make me a shining example
Of perfect working girl grooming.

II.

When I was a little older and finding life even more scrambling,
Rushing hither and yon, and always late at engagements,
Snowed under with papers, harangued by the phone and long-winded callers,
I felt the solution of all my problems
Would be a secretary.
Someone to whom I could toss all my letters and most of my callers,
Who would keep my desk at all times in the $5,000 classification,
Take care of all questionnaires on the state of my teeth or my morals,
Go over my bank statement, pay all my bills, figure my taxes,
Answer promptly all letters from Aunt Sallie, old schoolmates and alumnae committees,
In response to a "Here, Miss Smith," make me an outstanding example
Of perfect smoothly geared living.

III.

Now that I have attained to years of wider perspective,
And am standing wobbly-kneed in the midst of the current,
My mind confused under the pressure of "Shall I?" or "Shan't I?"
I have decided the only way out of life's dilemma
Is a manager.
Some firm, strong person of either sex with definite convictions,
Someone to whom the answers are always quite simple,
The scene black and white, no grays and no neutrals,
In trifles of life as well as in the great moments;
Someone able to say "Yes" and "No"—especially "No,"
With no qualifications.

IV.

Then I would indeed find my way made quite easy;
Should I carry an umbrella for fear it might rain before evening?
Or buy the print dress or the cute little bolero?
Or try a French haircut, use more rouge or less?
It would always be up to my manager.
Would I join this society, vote for this or that Mrs. Whoosis?
Would I go to this party or serve on that committee?
Would I boycott silk socks and what is my stand on John L. Lewis?
Would I renew the lease on my flat, and what will I do about Hitler?
To all of these I would answer in perfect tranquillity:
"I don't know—life is so complex—see my manager."

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

New Drug for Skin Ills.

Medicine gets its new drugs from many sources. Lately dermatologists have begun to use the chemical which has been used very widely as a water softener—sodium hexametaphosphate. When applied as a powder on the skin, it removes the irritation from soap and oil and reduces invisible perspiration by 50 per cent. It is recommended for cases of excessive sweating, soap dermatitis, oil acne and ringworm infection—athlete's foot.

Some soaps dissociate in solution on the skin to form free alkali which attacks the skin, causing absorption of the water. This soap dermatitis causes smarting and burning, sometimes followed by a reddening of the skin, especially on the hands and feet. The condition is common in some industries.

Bathing the affected part with a solution of sodium hexametaphosphate in the morning before work, during the noon hour, immediately after work, and just before going to sleep at night, has reduced this irritation in many instances. It prevents the occurrence of the dermatitis, and also cures it if it has occurred.

Oil acne consists in pimples on the skin due to the use of certain oils in industry. Patients who have used calomine lotion, ammoniated mercury, boric acid and alcohol for this oil acne with no response, were relieved almost immediately by the same form of treatment as was used for soap dermatitis. Sodium hexametaphosphate is also effective as a preventive of oil acne.

The raw, weeping sores of athlete's foot dry rapidly when this treatment is used, and putting a little of the powder in the socks or dusting it into the shoes give great help in prevention of recurrent attacks.

Ecessive sweating, especially in the feet, has been relieved in the same way.

The diaper rash of infants also responds to this new medicament.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

ARE YOU always catching colds now that you are taking off weight? It is not the weight loss that makes you susceptible to every cold germ that comes your way. More than likely the trouble is a lack of vitamin A in your diet.

As a matter of fact, you do not "catch cold." You build up a cold by lowering your resistance to infection, and scientific research has shown a definite connection between a low vitamin A diet and various respiratory infections. You may be concerned to know, also, that vitamin A deficiency is associated with night blindness.

The common cold is responsible for most of our off days. Perhaps this is due to the fact that it is so easy for us to neglect the foods high in vitamin A. These foods include most of the yellow and green vegetables. The thin, green leaves seem to be particularly high in vitamin A. The vitamin is supplied liberally in carrots, apricots, bananas, spinach, turnip greens, beans, egg yolk and beef liver.

Three favorite sources, however, are butter, cream and whole milk, and these foods are necessarily curtailed in the reducing menus—as those of you who rebel at half pats of butter and teaspoons of cream are well aware. If you follow the menus exactly, you should have an adequate vitamin A intake because all the foods are high in vitamins, although they are in the low calory group. However, a continued susceptibility to colds means your resistance is down and the vitamin A in the diet is not enough for you. Try taking one vitamin A capsule daily as a cold preventive. These vitamin concentrates are invaluable to the reducer, since they are too low in calories to affect the weight.

Your health should come first always, and it is certainly the most important thing in your reducing program. You need energy to take off weight scientifically, and an increase in your vitamin A intake may make a great difference in your vitality. Vitamin A in liberal amounts is essential in the diets of both children and adults. Aside from safeguarding your reducing menus, it would be well to help the members of the family form habits of nutrition which assure their well-being. Colds are not as contagious in families that are accustomed to high vitamin diets.

New Slip Covers for Spring

PERHAPS you're from Missouri about home-made slip covers. You'd love to make a new cover for your worn chair—but could you really make a trim-looking one yourself?

You could! In less than a day you can stitch up a lovely cover like the cedar green one in the picture. You can trim it smartly, too. How about a beige moss fringe to match the beige dots?

The fit? By following these simple tips you make your cover fit like a glove.

Smooth your material over the upholstery, wrong side up if you use the moss fringe. Begin at the top and work toward the front of the seat, pinning the material to the upholstery every 3 inches.

To relieve strain, allow a 4-inch tuck-in between seat and back as the diagram shows. Leave a 2-inch tuck-in between the seat and each arm.

Do you notice bunchy places where back and arms are rounded? Make tiny folds or darts in the material like those in the picture—and your cover will shape up beautifully.

Now you're ready to cut, baste and stitch. Trim neatly, 1½ inches outside the pins to allow for seams. Pin in moss trimming from the right side, baste on the wrong side and try on. Is it just right? Only a final stitching lies between you and a stunning new chair, which has cost you really very little.

In our 40-page booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully," are diagrams and instructions easy to follow for all types of chairs and sofas. Tips on materials, color schemes, smart year-round styles.

Send 15c for our booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Roosevelts Entertain for Speaker and Mrs. William Bankhead At Last State Dinner in White House Scheduled for This Season

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

This season's last State dinner at the White House was chalked off the calendar last night when the President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained in honor of the Speaker of the House and Mrs. William B. Bankhead.

Covers were laid for 91 guests, the largest number attending any dinner at the Executive Mansion this winter—with the exception of the diplomatic dinner. A number of Senators and Representatives, selected irrespective of political affiliation, a United States Ambassador and a college president were in the party. Later, a number of additional guests came in for the musicale that featured six artists.

HOPE R. MILLER.

As at other dinners on the White House schedule this winter, the Roosevelt china and goblets were complimented with massive gold candlesticks bearing tall tapers, gold epergnes filled with fruit and the ornate mirrored plaque dating from the Monroe administration. Pink roses, freesia and maidenhair fern were used as additional decorations for the horseshoe-shaped table.

Delano, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. F. Charles Fellowes-Gordon, of England, who are house guests of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt; John H. Grady, and Mr. and Mrs. John L. Lewis.

D. Easil O'Connor and Miss Bettyann O'Connor, of New York, were there; also Mr. and Mrs. D. Harold Oliver, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse L. Shepherd, Col. and Mrs. John J. The latter entertains at dinner in her honor Monday evening. A native of Quito, Senorita Montalva has traveled extensively through Europe and the Americas and now makes her home in New York City. Her interpretation of "Jarabe Tapatio," the national dance of Mexico, was one of the most effective numbers on the varied and colorful program last night.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

TEA DANCES, outside of college fraternity houses, have become increasingly rare since the days when every F. Scott Fitzgerald heroine seemed to spend all her time attending them. Yet it is definitely refreshing to meet up with one occasionally, as was proved yesterday when William K. Ryan gave such a party for Miss Graciela Trucco and her fiance, Fernando Illanes.

DUDLEY HARMON.

The inclosed porch of the 1925 F Street Club had been turned over to Sidney's Orchestra, and the maestro had brought along with him an attractive young singer, William, in his coachman's outfit, and a red carpet leading up the steps to the club, gave sign to arriving guests that the party was to be on the big side, and sure enough, more than 100 turned up. They all seemed to get there during the last hour, however. What is this fear people have of arriving at a party before it becomes thoroughly packed and jammed?

• • • •

EVERYBODY YESTERDAY was thronging around Mrs. Wallach Merriam, who was making her first appearance after several painful weeks in the hospital. Still obliged to use a cane, she sat most of the afternoon in the dining room.

The club never looked better than it did yesterday, with masses of tulips and other spring flowers, with red as the general color scheme. The buffet was in the smaller room across the hall and the food was such as to make even the most jaded cocktail party goer take an interest in life again. Even the ordinarily dull sausage becomes a prize delicacy at the 1925 F Street Club.

A tour through the library, drawing room and bar revealed the following: Sheldon Thomas chatting with his colleague from the State Department; Dorsey Fisher, Miss Laura Tuckerman, in black; Miss Vera Bloom and Miss Sibilla Skidelsky who came together; Miss Francesca McKenny and Mrs. Crosby Miller who did likewise (Mrs. Miller, by the way, commutes to Warrenton almost daily, even late at night after dinners); Mannix Walker, Caroline Chantry, Mrs. William T. Mann, Mrs. Sims Snow, Mme. Charles Lucet, Miss Stellita Stapleton, in black with much silver fox; William Phillips, Miss Jean Conrad, Miss Dorothy Tirrell and many another.

• • • •

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE HOWE will have as their guests for several days Mr. and Mrs. E. Melville Stone, of New York. Mrs. Stone is the former Miss Katherine Lapsley, of New York, is related to Mrs. Columbus Iselin, of that city, and is a cousin of Mrs. Robert Post, the former Miss Margot Lapsley.

The Stones are motoring down today and after their sojourn here will go to Mexico for a stay.

• • • •

ETHEL HARRIMAN, or Ethel Borden, as she prefers to be known professionally, who was here for the opening of Katharine Dayton's "Save Me the Waltz," is herself writing a play. The daughter of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Minister to Norway, has collaborated with Mary Cass Canfield on a work which is said to be almost ready for production. Clever and amusing, Miss Harriman has been for the past few years slaving away at scenario writing for the czars of Hollywood.

It will be recalled that she was at one time married to Henry Russell, but resumed her maiden name after a divorce. She has played on Broadway and once toured the country giving "dualogues" with Viola Tree, daughter of Sir Henry Beerbohm Tree.

Miss Canfield, her collaborator, is by now rather a veteran at playwrighting, having made a number of sallies in this precarious field before.

• • • •

MRS. RUDOLPH STANLEY-BROWN has returned to her residence at 2123 Bancroft place, after a visit in New York with her family. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stanley-Brown, of Long Island, parents of Mr. Stanley-Brown, are at present visiting their son and daughter-in-law, who gave a dinner for them last night. . . . Billy Bell, who did newspaper work here for a while, is back in town again from New York for a few days. He is staying with Herbert Ford, of American Airlines. . . . The Counselor of the German Embassy and Frau Thomsen will entertain at a cocktail party on Tuesday.

2 Skirm Sisters Are Betrothed

Announcement has been made of two engagements in the family of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Skirm. One of their daughters, Dorothy Dowling, is betrothed to S. Albert Mickler, son of the late Judge and Mrs. Albert H. Mickler, of St. Augustine, Fla. Another daughter, Bernice Margaret, will be married to Dr. Louis Faust, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin A. Faust, of Carteret, N. J.

Miss Bernice Skirm is a graduate of Immaculata Seminary. Dr. Faust is a graduate of Georgetown University Dental School and is now engaged practicing dentistry here.

Miss Dorothy Skirm is a graduate of Trinity College, 1935. Her fiance received his A. B. and LL. B. degrees from Georgetown University and is practicing law here.

Dates of the weddings will be announced later.

• • • •

Miss Mae Vance had as her guest over the week-end Mrs. Clara Thorwald, of New York, well-known water-colorist.

Mrs. Thorwald is en route to Miami, where she will exhibit some of her paintings, but will return here this spring to show her collection. At present some of her pictures are on view at the Park Vendome and Martin galleries in New York.

Roberto Cordova Now At Temporary Residence

Roberto Cordova, recently appointed legal counselor of the Mexican Embassy, has arrived in Washington and is staying temporarily at 2400 Sixteenth street, accompanied by his wife and three children.

Mr. Cordova was formerly Mexican agent of the Mexican-American Claims Commission.

Maloneys Entertain Louisiana Newlyweds

Representative and Mrs. Paul H. Maloney, of Louisiana, have as their house guests at the Wardman Park Hotel, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Leonval Hardie, of New Orleans, who arrived here yesterday from New York City.

Mr. and Mrs. Hardie, who were married February 1 in New Orleans, are on their way home from the North, where they have been on a wedding trip and they will remain a few days in Washington. Representative and Mrs. Maloney will entertain for them informally.

Miss Harrison To Attend Club

Miss Nancy Harrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Harrison, and Eugene Franklin O'Connor, son of Judge and Mrs. Eugene O'Connor, whose marriage will take place Saturday afternoon, will attend the Friday Evening Supper Club at the Sulgrave the evening before their wedding. With them will be Miss Fifi O'Connor, sister of the bridegroom, and prospective maid of honor; Barry Mohun, who will be best man, and a group of out-of-town guests.

Mrs. Edward Fairfax Randolph, of Wellington, Va., entertained at a shower for the bride-elect last Thursday.

Venezuelan Guest Of Ex-Envoy to Go Back to New York

Sneora Mara Garcia-Uslar, of Venezuela, who has been the guest this week of Dr. Pedro Arcaya, former Venezuelan Minister to the United States, and Senora de Arcaya, will return to New York tomorrow.

Yesterday she was the guest for whom Mrs. Preston MacGoodwin entertained at luncheon at the Hay-Adams House, and last night the Charge d'Affaires of Venezuela and Senora Fombona-Pachano gave a dinner in her honor.

Bachmans Off On Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Freeland Bachman, who were married Saturday afternoon, are spending their honeymoon in New York. Upon their return they will make their home here, where the bridegroom is in motion picture business.

The bride, who was formerly Miss Anne Philomena Abell, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Roach Abell, of Leonardtown, Md., and Washington. The wedding took place in the rectory of Sacred Heart Church, with the Rev. Edward Roach, a cousin of the bride, officiating in the presence of a small company of relatives and friends.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an afternoon dress of royal blue chiffon, fashioned with shirring at the waistline, a small collar and short puffed sleeves. With this she wore a turban of matching shade, set off with a brief veil. Her arm bouquet was of talisman roses and snapdragons.

Mrs. Ernestine Payne Jenkins, of Leonardtown, Md., cousin of the bride, was the matron of honor. Her dress of rose chiffon was made similar to that of the bride, and she wore a small brown hat and matching accessories. A shoulder corsage of gardenias completed her costume. John Bachman, of Philadelphia, was best man for his brother.

Mrs. Biddle Steals the Show At Women's Press Luncheon

Miss Katharine Dayton Is Other Speaker on Interesting Program; Latest Given on the Windsors.

Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., wife of the United States Ambassador to Poland, and Miss Katharine Dayton, author of the current play at the National Theater, divided the spotlight at the weekly luncheon of the Women's National Press Club at the Willard yesterday.

Miss Dayton was guest speaker, but Mrs. Biddle also made a brief talk—to the delight of an audience generously sprinkled with guests. A small, soft-voiced woman with a forthright manner and a flair for making friends on short notice, Mrs. Biddle won her audience instantly and was detained for some time at the close of the luncheon by those who crowded around to ask her more questions.

Some of those fortunate enough to be at the same table with her got their interviewing in between courses and found out that Mrs. Biddle talks enthusiastically about Warsaw, enjoys living there, and feels she is missing some good times in being away even on this brief visit to America. "But of course I love being here, too," she hastened to add.

Does Not Believe Latest Windsor Rumor

The most recent report regarding the Duchess of Windsor was mentioned in the table talk, and Mrs. Biddle, who saw the Windsors not long ago in Paris, said she did not believe the stork was hovering near them. She said the duchess had lost much weight in recent months, was much thinner than at the time of her marriage, and looked as if she might be in ill-health. "But I do believe the duke and duchess are happily married," she added. When someone suggested they did not look so in most of their photographs, she replied: "But you can't judge by that. In real life they certainly look happy."

Mrs. Biddle's mother, Mrs. William Boyce Thompson, who used to spend much time on her magnificent yacht, the Alder, which often anchored off Hains Point while its owner visited friends in Washington, is now in Paris, Mrs. Biddle said. A little over a year ago, Mrs. Thompson sailed into port here with a distinguished guest aboard the Alder—a woman who lived here before marrying into a royal European family. She is the Duchesse de Chaulnes, formerly Miss Theodora Shonts, daughter of the late Theodore Perry Shonts, who was chairman of the Panama Canal Commission under Theodore Roosevelt. Mrs. Biddle mentioned that her mother frequently sees the duchesse, who makes her home in Paris.

Katharine Dayton Makes Brief Talk

"Playwriting—like politics—is a gamble," observed Miss Dayton in her brief talk following the luncheon. "You never know how your piece will turn out until it's tried on an audience." Her current play, 'Save Me the Waltz," is undergoing drastic pruning and revision, she implied. "All the trouble that writing a play brings you wouldn't be worth it . . . if it weren't fun, in the long run," she added.

She doesn't admit this play has any deep political significance and declared her meeting Mussolini several years ago influenced her in formulating her ideas of a dictator. On the whole, despite the play's lukewarm reception by Washington critics, Miss Dayton is optimistic about its possibilities. "But there's much to be done yet," she averred.

Among guests yesterday was another playwright, Mary McDougal Axelsen (Mrs. Ivor Axelsen), whose Broadway hit of a few years ago, "Life Begins," was staged by Robert B. Sinclair, who also directs "Save Me the Waltz." A former resident of New York, now making her home in Hollywood, Mrs. Axelsen will leave today for New York before returning to the Coast. With Mrs. Axelsen at the luncheon was her mother, Mrs. D. A. McDougal, of Washington.

Other guests included Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mrs. Nathan Straus, Mrs. Crosby Miller, Mrs. Ralph Church, Mrs. Gordon Suydam, Mrs. William E. Barrett, Miss Dayton's sister, Mrs. Joseph R. Greenwood, of New York, and Mrs. Carmen Bethencourt, of Caracas, Venezuela, manager of a wholesale importing business which she took over after the death of her husband. Mrs. Bethencourt arrived in New York a few days ago on business and came on to Washington to spend a few days before returning home.

Mrs. Morgenthau Talks On Rural Alliance Work

Wife of Treasury Secretary Tells Group of Distinguished Members Benefits in Kentucky Might Be Spread.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The work of the Alliance for Guidance of Rural Youth, which has been outstanding in Breathitt County, Ky., could be done in other areas where there was similar cooperation, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, told members of the Washington branch of the organization yesterday. Mrs. Morgenthau, who recently returned from a trip there with Mrs. Roosevelt to attend a Farm and Home Week celebration, talked informally at a meeting in the lounge of the A. A. U. W. clubhouse.

People of that section have an indomitable spirit, said Mrs. Mongenthau, as evidenced by the boy who introduced Mrs. Roosevelt and who walked 15 miles daily to attend high school.

She was told, she said that there was no necessity for the draft in Breathitt County during the war, because the draft quota was more than filled by volunteers.

"Although I am essentially a pacifist," said Mrs. Morgenthau, "I admire the spirit of such people who volunteer their service to their country in time of war, and that same spirit, with proper direction, makes fine citizens in peacetime."

The alliance has been responsible for a complete change in the school curriculum there, she said. Provision is made for older boys and girls who have had no previous opportunity to attend school and would be discouraged by having to begin elementary subjects with younger children. They are taught painting, drawing, wood carving and other handicrafts of practical value, in which they can utilize their talents. Mrs. Morgenthau told the alliance that in some cases the pictures produced by high school students compared favorably with those of recognized young artists.

There are also special classes in writing and in music. In all the arts, students are encouraged in an appreciation of their surroundings—their pictures interpreting life they know, their music preserving traditions of mountain singing.

The feuds in that section of Kentucky are dying out, Mrs. Morgenthau believes, and new opportunities are being opened for the younger generation. Schools are held only from July to January because during the rest of the season roads are often impassable. Average income of a family in that section is but $120 a year and an effort is being made in the educational program to develop new means for the people to earn a livelihood.

The Washington branch of the alliance plans a survey of rural young people coming here to seek emploment and will enlist cooperation of other youth-serving agencies such as the Y. W. C. A., Y. M. C. A. and Travelers' Aid Society. A steering committee is to meet at the "Y" Saturday at 1 o'clock to discuss the project, John Lang, secretary of the alliance, announced.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, who is also head of the Washington branch of the alliance, presided at yesterday's meeting. It was preceded by a tea. Mrs. Hugo Black, vice president and wife of Justice Black of the Supreme Court, poured tea, wearing a becoming gray costume with a red velvet hat and a matching scarf at her neck.

Among the guests was Mrs. Robert Mosely, of London, chairman of American proxies for the Associated Farm Women of the World, who was there with Miss Grace Frysinger, vice president for North America.

Among others present were Mrs. Cyril Smith, corresponding secretary of the Washington branch; Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Genevieve Herrick, who had with her Mary Beard, jr.; Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools; C. E. Lamson, director of the District of Columbia Employment Center, who discussed the employment survey; Dr. Louise Stanley; E. W. Drumm, of the Y. W. C. A.; Miss Helen Samuel, accompanied hy her father; Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court; Mrs. Richard Hogue, president of the Washington branch of the A. A. U. W., and Mrs. Blair Banister, Assistant Treasurer of the United States.

MRS. ALEXANDER WOLF'S poems, which appeared in the "Convention Daily" issued at the triennial convention of the National Council of Jewish Women, recently held in Pittsburgh, were enjoyed by members of the local council yesterday afternoon. They were introduced in a skit presented by the delegates, dramatizing the interesting points of the convention program and their own experiences while they were there.

The skit was "just written by spontaneous combustion." Mrs. Mark Lansburgh, council president, who was one of the delegates, explained—and the poems by Mrs. Wolf (Mrs. Lansburgh's sister), were an entertaining feature of it.

It will send a copy to the county federation, and club members will acquaint their representatives in Congress with their stand—a privilege their sister clubwomen in the District envy them.

D. A. R. Told Magazine Is 'Sell-out'

Mrs. Keyes Says 3,000 More Copies Ordered for March.

Announcement of a "sell-out" of the February issue of the National Historical Magazine of the D. A. R. three days after it was issues was the good news brought to the District magazine committee yesterday by the editor, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes. Mrs. Keyes, Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, author of the new feature, "Your Capital City—and Mine," now appearing in the publication, and Mrs. Vinton Earl Sisson, chairman of national defense through patriotic education, were guests of honor at the committee's luncheon at the Highlands.

The affair marked the final meeting under the chairmanship of Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke. Other special guests were Mrs. Charles Haig, regent of the D. C. D. A. R.; Miss Lillian Chenoweth, vice regent; Mrs. Wade H. Ellis and the club editors of the Washington newspapers.

Mrs. Keyes and Mrs. Vandenberg were the luncheon speakers. Mrs. Vandenberg talked briefly and Mrs. Keyes was then introduced and discussed the magazine. She announced not only that the February issue had been sold out, but that the magazine is being replated for the printing of several hundred additional copies and that the printing order for March is 3,000 above that for the current month.

Members of the magazine committee, whose purpose it is to increase its circulation, have found their work booming in the past few months as it has never done before. They were enthusiastic over the announcement of the "sell-out."

Mrs. Keyes also discussed new features included in the magazine and assured the D. A. R.'s that no new department would be added at any time without careful consideration—that the department devoted to parliamentary procedure, which recently has been included, is one which was contemplated long before she took over the editorship. She invited "fan mail" and constructive criticism, as, she said, all editors do, because it is the best available barometer of public opinion.

Mrs. Creyke presided at the luncheon, wearing a black suit with a white satin vest, and a small black hat with a veil. Mrs. Keyes was in a costume suit of green, with hat of the same material, and Mrs. Vandenberg wore black, with a necklace of pearls at the high neck of her tailored dress. Mrs. Sisson's dress was of powder blue crepe with a flowered print vest and she wore with it a broad-brimmed black hat. Another note of color was Mrs. Ellis' costume—a dubonnet crepe dress with hat to match.

Among the guests in addition to committee members representing the 60 D. A. R. chapters in the District were: Mrs. Z. Lewis Dalby, national vice chairman of the magazine committee; Mrs. T. Temple Hill, State chaplain; Mrs. Earl B. Fuller, State corresponding secretary; Mrs. Catherine B. Strong, State recording secretary; Mrs. Samuel B. Woodbridge, State librarian; Mrs. B. Harrison Lingo, national vice chairman of junior membership; Mrs. C. E. Ferguson, secretary of the magazine committee and general chairman for the luncheon; Mrs. Roy C. Bowker, State chairman of approved schools; Mrs. Sterling Bockhoven, State chairman of publicity; Mrs. Joseph N. Saunders, State chairman of Junior American Citizens, and Mrs. Roger Williams, junior membership chairman.

First Lady Meets Labor Chief

Greetings were exchanged by Mrs. Roosevelt and John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chieftain, when they met yesterday at the opening session of the advisory council of the National Youth Administration. Lewis said he attended to show that the C. I. O. is interested in young people.

Holland Celebrates Princess' Birth

1 This herald, on horseback and dressed in medieval costume, spread throughout The Hague tidings of the birth of Princess Beatrix to Crown Princess Juliana and Prince Bernhard. The herald's proclamation was the signal for great celebration.

2 School children were pleased not only because of the arrival of a princess who some day may rule them but also because they were given a holiday. They celebrated by eating the traditional "beschuit met misjes," a sugared biscuit. The populace had waited anxiously for the event for days and preparations had been well-completed weeks before.

3 Artillerymen fired a 51-gun salute in honor of the royal daughter, the first heir of the House of Orange Nassau since Juliana's birth 28 years ago, and then abandoned ceremony for three hearty cheers as in the exuberant scene above. If the baby had been a prince there would have been a 102-gun salute.

Two recent incidents illustrate aptly how easy it is for American thought to be misrepresented abroad.

One was Admiral Leahy's innocent statement on the Hill that he "would be happy" to engage Japan's fleet with an equal fleet.

Admiral Leahy.

This is likely to be misconstrued by the more pugnacious Japs as an invitation to come out in the alley.

* * * *

The second instance was the group picture of the little businessmen raising their hands feverishly for a chance to make a speech.

The betting is two to one that this picture will be printed in Italy and Germany as proof that the fascist salute is getting stylish here.

* * * *

An hour or so after John L. Lewis heard his miners boom him for the Presidency in 1940, and heard one of his boys denounce the D. A. R. as "sour-faced battleaxes," he was eating dinner alone at a quiet but fashionable hotel across the square from the White House.

"—looks like a fascist salute"

The head-waiter tip-toed up and told Mr. Lewis that a "recent immigrant" had spotted him and wanted the privilege of a few words.

"Bring him over," said Lewis, whose off-stage manners are gentler than his appearance.

* * * *

The "immigrant," a torrid-eyed, swarthy Latin, spend the next 40 minutes giving the C. I. O. generalissimo a pep-talk about what European radicals would do in America, so this column's ace eavesdropper reports.

* * * *

Very patiently and politely, Mr. Lewis explained to him that what might work in Europe couldn't possibly work in this star-spangled republic.

J. L. Lewis

Tom Girdler or Ernest Weir couldn't have done a more intelligent job.

I wonder if President Roosevelt realizes that on the shelves of the downstairs book room at the White House are two separate duplicate copies of Van Loon's "Ships."

"—studying the people's choice"

There's a great deal of jollying around the State Department these days about our erudite Ambassador to Spain . . . Officials there refer to him as "temporarily" stationed at St. Jean de Luz, where he has been for many months.

* * * *

When the State Department announced the seizure (and later, the release) of an American ship by Franco's piratical navy, the newsmen chortled at the word "temporarily."

"Is he still alive?" demanded one scribe.

One of eternal mysteries to meditative onlookers in the House galleries is by what devious process a certain individual becomes the choice of 300,000 people or so in a congressional district to represent it in Congress and make laws for the Republic.

The naive assumption is naturally that the Representative was chosen as the wisest, ablest, most patriotic, most trustworthy and lovable person in the district, via the tortuous channels of democracy.

So the tourists in the gallery study this awesome diversity of faces, trying to penetrate through the dross of physiognomy the pure gold beneath. As they pursue this pastime bemusedly they forget to listen to the speeches.

Mother and Child Leap to Safety as Train Hits Auto

Cheating death by a few seconds, Mrs. Stella Wiseman, 26, of Berwyn Heights, Md., yesterday grabbed her 7-year-old daughter and jumped to safety when her car stalled on the Baltimore & Ohio grade crossing at Berwyn, Md., in the path of an express train.

Witness said the woman was no more than 10 feet from the tracks when the train struck the automobile and hurled it 150 feet.

Mrs. Wiseman was taking her daughter, Ruth, to the Holy Redeemer School at Berwyn when the accident occurred.

J. Fred Keefauver, a storekeeper, who rushed to Mrs. Wisemans side after the crash, said she was not excited. Her daughter went to school a few minutes later.

Mrs. Wiseman is the wife of Daniel Wiseman, a special State policeman assigned to duty on the University of Maryland campus.

Farewell Scenes at Old Sidwell Friends School on I Street

Friday will mark the closing of Sidwell Friends School at 1811 I street and the transfer of students to suburban quarters at 3901 Wisconsin avenue. The old building will make way for a hospital. Dr. Albert Edward Rogers, headmaster of the school, is shown with a student, Corrina Reesid, student council secretary.

A group of students spend a few last hours in the popular recreation room. Clustered around the radio-phonograph, a gift of Herbert Hoover when he was President, are John Fergus (left), Marjorie Moffitt, Mary Miller and Oliver McKee. The building, which also is a Friends Meeting House, has been the center of Quaker activities here since 1811.

Col. Charles Lindbergh was a student at the Friends School from 1913 to 1915, and his desk this year was held by Albert E. Marland, who is shown removing books and papers preparatory to moving out to the Wisconsin avenue branch. Classes have been held in the building since 1879.

Burleith Backs Relief Request For $2,000,000

Citizens' Speakers Point to Access of States to WPA Funds.

The Burleith Citizens Association last night urged Congress to appropriate $2,000,000 for emergency relief in the District of Columbia. Speakers said the money is urgently needed. In the States, it was pointed out, the Legislatures, by authorizing money for various projects, were having that money matched by WPA. Here, the speakers said, that was not being done.

The association also engaged in a spirited discussion of the service of the Capital Traction Co., and of the need of keeping undesirables out of their neighborhood when restrictions expire in 1943.

Randle Highlands

Formal complaint against conditions at the new Randle Highlands School was made to the Board of Education last night by the Randle Highlands Citizens Association, in session at 2407 Minnesota avenue southeast.

The group called attention to the fact that it had been necessary, in the absence of desks, to use boxes and crates for a time, although the condition now has been corrected. Blackboards are unsatisfactory, the association said, as is the heating plant.

Immediate construction of a new Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge was demanded by the group. Hugh C. Bickford, president of the Prince Georges County Association, addressed the meeting and assured the co-operation of his organization in this aim. The association went on record as favoring an amendment to the Constitution granting suffrage to the District.

Barry Farm Citizens.

The association also urged reinstatement of a $250,000 item in the District appropriation bill for preliminary work on the Pennsylvania avenue bridge.

Jordan's Appeal From Life Term Denied by Court

In a single word—"denied"—the United States Court of Appeals yesterday closed the door to the latest attempt of Thomas Jordan to escape life imprisonment for the slaying of Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes, cashier of the Columbia Road Garden-T Shoppe, in a holdup several years ago.

Jordan's death sentence was commuted to life imprisonment when friends suggested Jordan's companion might have fired the shot that killed Mrs. Jaynes.

His attorneys dug up an ancient common law rule which, they said, required the courts to reopen any case no matter how long it had been decided, if new evidence was produced, but the court held the rule had been in disuse too long.

Mrs. May DeBurr Asks Divorce From Dentist

Mrs. May V. DeBurr, 3700 Massachusetts avenue northwest, yesterday filed suit for absolute divorce in the District Court. Her husband, Dr. Stephen DeBurr, is a dentist. Mrs. DeBurr said her husband deserted her and their two children in the spring of 1936. She declared he had a large practice and that his mother owned real estate valued at $750,000 in New York. The petition asked alimony and custody of the children.

Lindbergh's Old Desk Cleared As D. C. Friends School Moves

Four Upper Classes Go to New Classrooms on Friday; Old Meeting House, Used Since 1811, Will Be Torn Down.

The desk on which Charles A. Lindbergh once wrote his lessons was being cleared of books for the last time yesterday as the senior grades at Sidwell Friends School, 1811 I street northwest, prepared to move to new classrooms.

Through the classrooms, where children of the great and near-great have recited, were scattered packing cases, containing the treasures accumulated through more than half a century. On Friday the four upper classes, high school students, will move to a building on the school grounds at 3901 Wisconsin avenue.

Shortly afterward, the school building and the Friends Meeting House, headquarters of Quaker activities in the District since 1811, will be torn down to make way for the new ten-story Doctors' Hospital. The last meeting of Friends at the old house was held Sunday. Where their next meeting will be held has not been determined.

First move in the transfer of classes was made last Friday when students in the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grades moved from their old building on the Wisconsin avenue site to a recently completed building nearby. The building they vacated will be used by the high school students.

Primary Grades Unaffected.

The primary grades, which have been using the Wisconsin avenue grounds for more than 20 years, will not be affected by the changes. But during the rest of this week they will be brought, a class at a time, to the downtown school for regular classes there.

The move is being made less than two years after the death of Dr. Thomas W. Sidwell, founder of the school and its active head for more than half a century. Dr. Sidwell's portrait hangs just outside the study hall, in the downtown building, and to many of the present students his name still has the familiar ring of daily use.

There is an autographed picture of President Theodore Roosevelt, commemorating the time he spoke at graduation exercises in 1907. He told the class "Don't flinch, don't foul, and hit the line hard." One of the students who heard him was the President's son, Archie. Archie's schoolmates had been privileged to use the White House lawn for their games and they had earlier been taught the rules of the game by the President himself.

Around another portrait hovers the fragrance of the school's greatest romance. It is the picture of Setsu Matsudaira, painted by herself. Setsu, daughter of the Japanese Ambassador, left the picture for her friends at school when she went home to marry Prince Chichibu, brother of the Japanese Emperor.

Months after the marriage several members of the Japanese Embassy, dressed in frock coats, appeared one morning at the school. They brought with them a box, and inside, wrapped in a silk quilt, was a silver vase. This, too, was a gift from Setsu, engraved with the Imperial crest and the crest of Matsudaira.

School officials asked the Japanese diplomats what would be the correct way to express thanks for a gift from a princess. The diplomats replied that to her school mates and teachers Princess Chichibu was still Setsu, that their letter of thanks should begin "Dear Setsu . . ."

More recently the grandchildren of former President Hoover attended the school, and their grandfather, the first Quaker President, frequently visited the building. Shortly before he left the White House he sent the radio he had used there to the school. Its vicinity still is a favorite gathering place for students during the lunch hour.

These treasures will be taken to the suburban school, but there are others that must be left behind even though they are part of the school's story.

Another Set.

For example, when blackboards in one classroom were removed to be taken to the new building, they found beneath another set of blackboards. In one corner was written the names of the honor roll, among them the name of a present member of the board of trustees.

The honor roll had been hidden away since 1905, and the teacher who wrote the names has since founded her own school, the Madeira School at Greenway, Va.

More valuable are the old records of early Quaker activities in this country, long kept in the safe at the Meeting House. Among them are documents noting how, during the seventeenth century, Quakers were sentenced to be "whipped from constable to constable" until they were driven out of Maryland. Later, President John Quincy Adams attended the meetings, the records show, and on several occasions Henry Clay was a visitor.

These records will be stored, Dr. Rogers said, until a committee of Friends determines where to set up new headquarters for the meeting.

Capital and Labor Honor Richardson

Capital and labor joined yesterday in funeral tribute to Charles L. Richardson, trouble shooter of the Labor Department's conciliation service, who died Sunday in a fall from an Army plane that had run out of gasoline.

The Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, of First Congregational Church, conducted simple obsequies in the chapel of Lee funeral home, Massachusetts avenue and Fourth street northeast. The remains will rest temporarily in a receiving vault pending completion of arrangements for burial.

Mr. Richardson's coleagues served as active pallbearers. They were Howard T. Colvin, Edward J. Cunningham, Thomas M. Finn, William O. Liller, John A. Moffitt and Carl R. Schedler.

Honorary pallbearers were Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Virginia, from Mr. Richardson's home district; Dr. John R. Steelman, director of conciliation; Samuel Gompers, departmental chief clerk, and the full complement of commmissioners of conciliation.

Beale, Patent Office Aide, Dies at Bowling

Fred W. Beale, 65, assistant divisional chief of the Patent Office, died last night while he was bowling at the Rendezvous Bowling Alleys, in the 4600 block of Fourteenth street northwest.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed early this morning.

Mr. Beale is survived by his wife Mrs. Jeanette Beale, and two sons, Edward Beale of Bellhaven, Md., and William L. Beale of Chicago.

Woman Is 14th Traffic Victim; Two Girls Hurt

Youth, 18, Dies of Infection Possibly Caused by Auto Injury.

One woman was killed—the District's fourteenth traffic fatality of the year—and two children seriously injured in automobile accidents here yesterday.

In addition, an 18-year-old boy, John Wade, jr., 3851 Chesapeake street northwest, died at Garfield Hospital from a mouth infection that may have resulted from injuries received in an automobile accident December 31. An autopsy will be held today to fix cause of his death.

The woman victim died in Emergency Hospital late last night shortly after she had been knocked down by an auto at Sixteenth and U streets northwest. A colored woman, she was not immediately identified.

The injured girls are Ruby Halterman, 15, and Jacqueline Ridgeley, 14, both of the 200 block of Sixth street southeast. Both were in Providence Hospital, the Halterman girl suffering from internal injuries, a lacerated ankle and shock and the Ridgeley girl suffering from a badly lacerated head and a possible brain concussion.

The girls were knocked down at Third and Pennsylvania avenue southeast as they were running to watch firemen put out a blaze in an auto. The car that struck them was driven, police say, by Benjamin C. Albright, 44, of 1322 Massachusetts avenue southeast. He was charged with reckless driving by Fifth Precinct officers.

For the second time in as many days, a coroner's jury yesterday held vehicle operators responsible in a traffic death.

Mrs. Florence Sindell, 46, of 5465 Nebraska avenue northwest, was held under the negligent homicide act after an inquest into the death of Kenneth L. Fenton, 14, of 232 Channing street northeast.

Kenneth was killed Sunday at Broad Branch road and Brandywine streets northwest. His death was the District's thirteenth traffic fatality this year.

Monday, Marshall Scott, 43, of 1311 Longfellow street northwest, was held under the negligent homicide act in the death of Leonard DiGiovanni, 50, of 1361 Newton street northwest. DiGiovanni was killed by a street car at Fourteenth and Newton streets northwest.

Vocational Expert To See D. C. System

Pursuing a Nation-wide study of job guidance, vocational training and employment of youth, Dr. Edwin A. Lee, director of the National Occupational Conference, New York, will make a day's tour of Washington vocational schools today. He will be the guest of Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools.

Dr. Lee led a two-week occupational education tour in which Dr. Ballou participated last spring. At the conclusion of the tour the 13 superintendent members recommended a three-point occupational adjustment program in which public schools could assist youths and adults in selecting their vocations.

Georgetown Physicians Name Sister Rodriguez Honor Guest

Dr. Arthur O'Leary, President, Praises Her at Banquet Attended by 300; She Is Too Busy to Attend Hospital Event.

Sister Superior Rodriguez, superintendent of Georgetown Hospital, sat in a hallway last night and heard herself named guest of honor at the physicians' and faculty banquet.

She was honored by Dr. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University, one of the principal speakers at the affair, attended by nearly 300 physicians, techers and their wives.

Sister Rodriguez was too busy supervising the banquet to attend it. In her vestments she had gone among the guests before the reception which preceded the dinner, greeting old friends. Then she retired with the other sisters to the hallway to listen to the addresses which followed the meal.

"Sister Rodriguez is our guest of honor tonight," said Dr. O'Leary. He sketched her career of 30 years with the hospital, and told how large a part she had played in its growth since 1908. He praised the other sisters as well.

"I hope when Sister Rodriguez goes to her reward in heaven, where there are no hospitals, she will sometimes find a fallen angel whose wings need bandaging," said Dr. O'Leary.

The banquet brought together all members of the faculty and staff of the hospital. The other speaker was the Rev. David V. McCauley, S. J., dean of the School of Medicine and Dentistry.

Dr. McCauley paid tribute to the sisters, physicians and wives of the physicians. He told of the development of the hospital and the medical school during the past decade.

Mollie and Moe's Expected Event Stirs Zoo Interest

Mollie and Moe, the devoted pair of penguins who are unchallenged as the zoo's main attractions since it became known last week they are "expecting," underwent the critical gaze yesterday of Dr. Alexander Wetmore.

Dr. Wetmore is assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution in charge of the National Museum and an eminent ornithologist, but he came not so much as the scientist as the zoo fan eager, like thousands of others, to see the eggs.

"Your guess is as good as mine" was his reply when asked if he thought the labors of Mollie and Moe—the male penguin takes turns with his mate in sitting on the eggs—would be productive.

He expressed the belief that at least 30 days of "hatch work" was necessary, indicating that no young ones may be expected before March 2. The first egg was laid February 1, the second on or about last Friday.

Dr. Wetmore and Dr. William M. Mann, zoo director, agreed that it is quite unlikely Mollie will yield a third egg.

Elks' Charity Gifts Placed at $143,246

Charity contributions by the Washington Lodge of Elks from 1913 to 1937 totaled $143,246, it was revealed yesterday in a report issued commemorating the fifty-sixth anniversary of the local organization and the seventieth anniversary of the national order of Elks.

The report, prepared by William S. Shelby, secretary, shows that since the founding of the order in 1880 through 1937, all subordinate lodges contributed $45,844,021 to charitable organizations. The total for 1937 alone was $1,400,248.

Next Rendezvous Of Dead End Frat To Be With Court

The eight members of the Dead End Fraternity will meet today in the Receiving Home instead of their headquarters on the grounds of the Carry Ice Cream Co., 1300 D street southeast.

Instead of enjoying the feast they had planned for their next meeting, the eight boys—who range from 12 to 17 years—probably will be mumbling "crime doesn't pay."

Two members were caught with the goods last night. They were crawling under a fence at the ice cream plant. With them they had $50 worth of groceries stolen, police say, from two warehouses.

The two, overtaken by the law, implicated the six other members of the fraternity which apparently derived its name from the movie portraying life on New York's East Side. The other six boys were being rounded up last night.

Police Now Have Bibles in Every Precinct Station

The books were the gift of the Rev. F. F. Holsopple, president of the Washington Bible Society.

"Each station has a reading room and a rest room," Rev. Holsopple said, "where officers spend some part of their time. The society donated two Bibles to every station in the belief they may be of some use."

Bill Taxes Total Pay of Congressmen

Levy on Only Part Would Be Hard to Administer, Seal Declares.

By James D. Secrest.

Members of Congress will have to pay a local income tax on their full $10,000 salaries, instead of only that part which represents District residence, under provisions of the new District tax bill, if and when enacted into law, it was disclosed yesterday.

Printed copies of the committee draft of the new revenue bill, just released, also disclose that the proposed income tax would be retroactive to 1937 incomes and would be collectible March 15, this year.

The 1 per cent levy was designed, according to Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, who drafted the bill, to reach all income earned in Washington, whether by resident or nonresident.

Hard to Administer.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, sponsor of the income levy, had suggested that members of Congress pay the income levy only on that part of their salaries collected while they were living in the District.

Thus, if a Congressional session lasted six months, or less, the taxable gross income would be $5,000, or less. Seal said no such provision was written into the bill and he added that it would be difficult to administer if enacted.

With many hurdles to clear yet, however, the three-point tax measure is likely to undergo considerable rewriting before being passed by Congress. Present indications are that it will not become a law before March 15, when the income tax would become payable.

A safeguard against nonresidents who might try to evade the income levy is another new feature of the draft.

"In the case of a nonresident who derives income taxable under this title from sources in the District," the bill reads, "the assessor shall require not to exceed 1 per cent of the income of said nonresident to be withheld by the employer or other person making payments to said nonresident for the purpose of satisfying the District income tax claim."

However, it is questionable whether the District tax assessor could persuade the Federal Government to withhold the tax on salaries of Federal employes who live in Maryland or Virginia.

Besides a revised business privilege tax, a $1.75 realty levy and the income tax, the bill carries new provisions placing additional "teeth" in the intangible personal property tax law amended last year.

Amendments Listed.

Among the amendments are requirements that corporations file with the assessor its bondholders, a secrecy ban on tax returns, and a provision to force trustees to report their holdings.

Details of the new board of tax appeals, which would supplement the present board of equalization and review, also were disclosed.

Comprising three persons to be named by the Commissioners, the board would include a lawyer of five years' standing, a certified public accountant and "a person engaged in some commercial enterprise or activity requiring a knowledge of commercial and business practices."

The salary of the chairman of the board, the lawyer, was set at $8,000 a year, and the salaries of the other two members at $7,000.

Ballroom Specialists Decline Film Offer That Refuse Them Lines to Speak.

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—The De Marcos, Renee and Tony—the highest paid ballroom dancers in the world—are about to give Hollywood the go-by because it won't let them act.

Having danced in New York's Rainbow Room, on the French Riviera, before the British royal family in London and currently in Hollywood's Trocadero, where they get $3,500 a week for performing 20 minutes a night, they're still not satisfied. They want to act

"We've had 20 offers to go into the pictures since we've been here," Tony reported at one of the blue-covered tables at the Trocadero. "Our latest offers were to play in 'Marie Antoinette' and in 'Alexander's Ragtime Band.'

"We turned 'em all down, because they wanted us to dance, and nothing else. We said if we couldn't have a speaking part, we'd do our dancing before a live audience."

Renee, his wife, who has 30 trunks of evening gowns, sipped a glass of soda pop and nodded her pretty head.

The longer we talked with them, the less we wanted to be half of a professional dancing team, despite that $3,500 every Saturday night.

They Enjoy It.

De Marco said they enjoyed it, even including the four hours of practice every day, the dancing lessons (they still take 'em), and the late hours. They perform nightly at 11:45 and they seldom get home before 4 a. m.

"One of our biggest thrills is on our nights off," he said. "We go to sleep at 9 p. m., and, boy, is that a pleasure!"

He has been a professional dancer for 21 years, ever since he left home in Buffalo, N. Y., and long enough even to feel comfortable in a long-tailed suit. Renee hasn't been at it so long. She thinks dancing is fun. She even likes to dance in England.

"It's funny over there," she said. "When you're performing, the audience always looks at the Queen, or the princess, or whoever is the most important person there. If she applauds, then everybody does likewise. If she isn't very excited about you, then nobody else is, either."

Liability to Asset.

The quick thinkers at Twentieth Century-Fox have in production at the moment a picture called "Mr. Moto's Gamble," which is one of the neatest jobs of turning a liability into an asset that Hollywood has seen.

Fox had spent about $100,000 starting a detective picture a few weeks back, called "Charlie Chan at the Ringside." Warner (Charlie Chan) Oland became ill and production was called off. That $100,000 looked like a total loss, until Producer Sol Wurtzel began to cogitate. Here's his solution:

He had Peter Lorre made up like another Chinese detective, called Mr. Moto, who was lecturing on criminology at a New York university. Then he had Chan's son, Keye Luke, announce that his father had gone to Hawaii on vacation, and appeal to Mr. Moto to carry on where Chan left off.

That, and a change of title, saved the studio $100,000 worth of film.

What! No Hot Dogs?

The fight ring is a standard one and everything about the performance seems authentic, except the odor. Instead of the smell of cigarettes, linament and hot dogs which usually permeates a fight arena, the only odor in Fox's stadium is that of burning resin.

A couple of prop men burn it in cans and spread the resultant smoke over the audience with palm leaf fans to give the atmosphere the proper prize-fight consistency. Resin smoke lasts longer than cigarette smoke. It's also tougher on the lungs.

The spectators, who earn $11 a day for watching the proceedings from comfortable opera chairs, cough and cover their faces, when the smoke puffs too heavily.

Lining them up, making them hide their dark glasses, and instilling the proper amount of synthetic enthusiasm in them is Shirley Temple's big brother. His name's Jack, he's blonde, his hair's getting a little thin on top, and he's third assistant director.

Swing College Is Built for Picture

Gone were the vine-covered walls and the tree-studded campus, and in their place were walls of rakish stream lines and a campus luxuriant with tropic foliage.

The set represents the change innovated in a New England college by Gracie Allen in "College Swing," in which she is featured with George Burns, Martha Raye, Edward Everett Horton, Bob Hope and Ben Blue.

Two hundred and ten palm trees and foliage shipped in from Mexico were required in landscaping the novel campus. Innovations at the college included a dais in the "quad" for a swing band, and a floor for the dancing of collegiate rumbas.

Star's Voice Now Sealed in Stone

Gladys Swarthout last week sealed up for some archeologist 100 years hence a strong box in which she placed the day's newspapers, a roll of film and four of her photograph records.

The box was lodged under the floor of a wing of her new home, now under construction in Beverly Hills.

Both the film and the phonograph records will preserve the memory of her current picture, "Romance in the Dark." On the phonograph records are operatic arias she sings with John Boles, while the film records a romantic scene with John Barrymore.

'Of Human Hearts' Proves a Poignant Screen Play Rich in the Drama of the Days of Circuit-Riders

Walter Huston, Beulah Bondi and James Stewart Lend Unusual Appeal to Play of Simple Life Among Primitive People; Tallulah Bankhead Here for Week; Theater Education League Is Projected; Mr. Kaufman Sees a Show; Notes of the Theater.

THERE is a simple, homespun poignance in "Of Human Hearts" that should strike a note of deep and honest responsiveness in every human heart. But will it?

BELL.

This column recently reproduced, in part, a letter from Oscar A. Doob, in charge of national publicity for Loew's, Inc., which lamented the fact that the home-office screening of this picture in New York had delayed his expected departure on vacation. It expressed his company's full confidence in the intrinsic merit of the film and its doubt of the manner in which it might best be conveyed to the theater-going public that here is a subject that delves deeply into family relationships and traffics for the most part in the somber shades of life, yet possesses qualities of honest worth that should appeal to all screen-gazers who find it possible to detach themselves, now and again, from the accustomed glitter and tinsel of Hollywood.

The same perplexity, I think, suggested itself to all of the drama desks that attended yesterday afternoon's preview of the picture in the tabloid theater in the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange, where it was run off as a sterling example of celluloid drama quite out of the usual groove.

No matter how firmly founded in the authentic fundamentals of life a play may be, it is a difficult matter to "sell" it to the public if gayety and merriment may not be held out as primary objects of interest in the relation of the story. They may not be in this case.

"Of Human Hearts" has precious few lively moments. It is morose, heavy with the tragic incidents of primitive and penurious living on the Midwestern frontiers in the days immediately preceding and during the War Between the States and visualizes the ominous results that may accrue when an overwhelming mother love intervenes between unsympathetic father and son. But it is a drama of such fine conception and such superlative execution that it ought to engage a wide and deep-seated public response among those not afraid or ashamed to face the realities of meager living and violent filial rebellion.

In such cursory remarks as these, preliminary to the play's more orderly review on Saturday, nothing more need be said on the side of the integrity of the acting than that the principal roles are intrusted to such able players as Walter Huston, Beulah Bondi, Charles Grapewin, James Stewart and Charles Coburn, with Guy Kibbee, Charles Aylesworth, Ann Rutherford, Sterling Holloway and numerous others rendering fine support.

One of the outstanding performances marks perhaps one of the most unusual departures from conventional casting recently noted. That is the assignment of John Carradine, a classic actor turned "heavy" for the cameras, to the role of Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Carradine is one of the few impersonators of the Great Emancipator we ever have seen who finds it possible to face the lenses and still look, act and sound like the great figure he portrays.

His scene is one of considerable length and is devoted to an exposition of that transcendent humanitarianism that caused the martyred President so fittingly to be known as the "great heart."

Probably the most stared-at figure in the entr'acte lobby crowds at the National Theater Monday night at the premiere of Max Gordon's production of Katharine Dayton's new comedy, "Save Me the Waltz," was Tallulah Bankhead. During the first-act intermission, Miss Bankhead confided to this column that the play was going on with only one dress rehearsal and that that one had been achieved under the handicap of a delayed "hanging" of the production; that it was a tense and nerve-wracking evening for the members of the cast and that she would be here throughout the current week, with her husband, John Emery, leading man in the play, and her father, Speaker of the House of Representatives. She also joined in this department's enthusiasm over the unparalleled charm of Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," opening at RKO-Keith's on Friday, and could not understand why, of all her favorite writers, Damon Runyon had failed to apprehend the marvelous entertainment values of this unprecedented production. There were some other things, too, but they can wait until a later day. There will be more of Miss Bankhead in this space—I hope.

Among other New York theatrical notables in Monday night's audience were Brock Pemberton, famous producer, and George S. Kaufman, collaborator with Miss Dayton on her earlier play, "First Lady," who watched the long-drawn-out proceedings from an obscure perch in the last row.

One suspects that Mr. Kaufman again will be named on the program as collaborator by the time "Save Me the Waltz" reaches New York for its first night on Broadway. He has a wealth of material from which to formulate a hit and a magnificent production by Max Gordon—Jo Milzeiner is the chap who really did it—to spur his resourcefulness.

At yesterday's screening of "Of Human Hearts," there also was shown one of those hair-raising, multiple-dimension, short-reel subjects in which objects leap off the screen and smack you right in the nose—provided you are wearing the trick red-and-blue spectacles provided to bring out this eerie business of delusive projection of everything from baseballs to streams from high-power fire hose into the audience. This one was a Pete Smith subject and will be on view on F street shortly. Perfect your dodging and take your best shrieker along when it bobs up. You will need both equipments!

Plans for organizing a Theater Education League, which will offer speakers and theatrical lecturers without charge to school and college groups throughout the country are being outlined today by Harold F. Kennedy, lecturer for the Mercury Theater and a member of the cast of Orson Welles' modern production of Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar," which Alex Yokel will present for a week's engagement in the National Theater, beginning next Monday night.

The group, composed of young college graduates currently employed as actors, writers or technicians in the New York theater, will begin active work next fall, at which time a delegation will be elected to membership from each of the worth-while Broadway plays planning a road tour. During the engagement of each of the plays in the key cities of the country, the delegate from the given production will be required to contribute his services as an informal speaker and as a backstage host to student groups actively concerned with the living theater.

That the schools and colleges urgently desire talks and discussions by active workers in the modern theater was conclusively proved when letters sent by the Mercury Theater, offering Mr. Kennedy's services as a speaker, received an 84 per cent return requesting talks. So great has been the demand for these lectures, in fact, that Mr. Kennedy was compelled to withdraw from the cast of "Julius Caesar" in Boston last Saturday night to fulfill all the engagements made in Washington and Baltimore. He will resume his role in the play here next Monday night.

Mr. Kennedy, it might be noted, is a graduate of Dartmouth College and the Yale University School of Drama and has spoken before more than 30,000 students in the four weeks the "Julius Caesar" company has been on tour. His experience has convinced him that the formation of the Theater Education League will supply a very real and very urgent demand of educational institutions and will do much to reclaim an audience which not only forms an important part of the present-day theater-going public, but will constitute the whole backbone, so to speak, of theater patronage in the next five or ten years.

• • • •

One of the afterthoughts of the preview of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" is that it is Roy Atwill's voice that is dubbed in for the particular dwarf who does all of the twisted talk—not "double talk," merely twisted. No one but Atwill could do it quite so well. Still I could be wrong.

PRINCIPALS IN WRESTLING YARN.

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Feb. 8.—Idol chatter: With 22 all-color pictures scheduled for 1938, looks like our glamour gals must re-acquire the knack of blushing. W. C. Fields, in a temper, is funnier than W. C. Fields in a pleasant mood—and W. C. is usually in a temper. Hollywood ironies: J. Carroll Naish, the screen's meanest villain, started his career as a boy soprano in a church choir. Irrespective of her screen success, plenty of Hollywood's bachelor biggies would like to give Marjorie Weaver a lifetime contract. Just in case you are interested—Pickfair can be purchased for a mere $500,000.

JACK OAKIE.

Claudette Colbert welcomes candid cameramen—if they will agree to photograph only the right side of her face and give her ample time to pose. Surprising how many big-salaried male stars patronize the "sell-for-less" clothing stores. Most startling sight of the week: Carole Lombard in high laced boots and canvas windbreaker, ready for a hunting trip with Clark Gable.

• • • •

If I had a pan like Ned Sparks' and a deck of cards—I would not waste my time acting. Anita Louise always reminds me of Elaine, the Lily-maid of Astolat. Check off one triumph for Hollywood marriage—it has at least cured Jack Oakie of the sweatshirt habit. One-word description o' Annabella: Radianticing. Wonder if it is pessimism that makes Fred MacMurray keep in practice on his saxophone?

Had a chat this morning with Director Otto Brower, just returned from the interior of Africa, whether he and Osa Johnston conducted a Twentieth Century unit to obtain location shots for "Stanley and Livingstone." Otto's experiences there make him regard the trials and tribulations of civilized (?) Hollywood with a very supercilious attitude. One of his major problems was encountered when he tried to pay the 2,500 natives who were recruited for jungle battle scenes. They used the coins which were offered them to make necklaces and ear ornaments, then demanded "real" pay in sugar, cloth, salt and brass wire. In order to keep their good will, part of the safari had to trek all the way back to Nairobi and lug back the trade goods. It required 50 husky porters to carry the pay for the native extras.

Christmas in Hollywood usually produces some rib-tickling "gags"—and 1937 was not an exception to the rule. At Columbia, a delegation of workme.. called on Lionel Stander, Filmville's most vociferous exponent of Marxism, the Single Tax and Equal Distribution of Wealth, and solemnly presented him with a large, oblong package, gaudily wrapped in tissue and tinsel. Lionel started stripping off the wrappings—layer after layer—and eventually uncovered his "present." It was a soap box!

A few days after the announced completion of "Headline Huntress," a new Twentieth Century-Fox opus, the company was suddenly summoned back for "retakes"—and thereby hangs a chuckle. Sol Wurtzel, producer of the picture, has a long memory. Nine years ago he produced a picture which contained a comedy telephone scene. It brought down the house. When "Headline Huntress" was first proposed and Wurtzel read the script he sensed opportunity and ordered that a similar scene should be written in. His writers obeyed and scene was duly filmed. Then, a week or two before the completion of the picture, Sol happened to see Columbia's new hit, "The Awful Truth." The funniest gag in the picture was that same telephone scene. Ray McCarey, director of "The Awful Truth," had directed that 9-year-old comedy. He also has a long memory. And he remembered first.

Lady in Lingerie Always Intrigues

Not only the "tired businessman" pays just a little closer attention when the action of a picture switches to the boudoir to show the leading lady in an attractive negligee or nightie. Nearly everyone likes to be included in the personal side of the leading characters' lives.

Bette Davis wears old-fashioned, pre-Civil War petticoats and paper hair curlers for certain scenes in "Jezebel." Bette agrees with the wardrobe workers that these items are "cute."

Just watch the audience sit up and take notice when Carole Lombard, in a sleek, satin nightie and mink-trimmed bed jacket, is served breakfast in a Chippendale bed by Fernand Gravet in "Fools for Scandal."

This is the "intimate touch" which producers and directors know an audience loves. Far from being immodest, the screen lingerie is generally more concealing than a modern street dress would be, but the lace and satin give the customers a vicarious thrill.

Chapter Twenty-Five.

HIS ELEVATION TO THE PRESIDENCY of the Washington club, in 1920, gave Clark Griffith the voice in major league politics that he had long sought. True, he had been one of the three cofounders of the American League back in the dim winter of 1900, when he met with Ban B. Johnson and Charles Comiskey to plot the new league's course in a West Side Chicago tavern. But Griffith, as a mere manager, was never entitled to sit in the high councils of the league club owners.

Now, as the president of a club, he was able to plunge vigorously into league affairs. No freshman club owner ever cut such a figure in the league's councils as did Griffith during the fall of 1920.

The harmony that had existed between the two big leagues, for the 18 years since the 1902 peace pact, had exploded loudly during the fag end of the season. Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, vowed that he would unseat Ban Johnson as president of the American League. He found willing allies in two other American League club owners—Charles Comiskey, of Chicago, and Harry Frazee, of the Boston Red Sox.

Ruppert, who had bought out his partner, Col. Tillinghast Huston, to assume complete control of the Yankees, was feuding with Johnson as a result of the Carl Mays ruling during the season of 1920. The Yankee owner, challenging Johnson's right to suspend Pitcher Mays, carried the case into the courts in an attempt to gain an injunction.

In any movement against League President Johnson, Ruppert could count upon the votes of Frazee and Comiskey. Frazee, who was financially obligated to the Yankees' owner, had no choice but to align himself with Ruppert. Comiskey had long been at war with Johnson.

The Comiskey-Johnson feud had been intensified the year before—in 1919—following the Chicago owner's suspicions that "there was something crooked" about the White Sox-Cincinnati World Series.

Comiskey's manager, Kid Gleason, had recited to the Chicago owner his belief that the White Sox players "did not bear down" during the 1919 World Series. There was evidence, Gleason pointed out, that the White Sox were not trying to win; veterans had made stupid plays and his pitchers were startlingly ineffective.

Three American League Club Owners Threaten Secession.

COMISKEY HAD CARRIED GLEASON'S suspicions . . . and his own . . . to Johnson, with the demand that the league president investigate. Johnson, who had been at odds with his former friend, Comiskey, for several years, gave the White Sox owner no satisfaction.

JACOB RUPPERT, Yankee owner, who threatened to bolt American League in 1920.

"You're just squawking because you lost the series," said Johnson, refusing to take any steps toward the investigation of the series.

Throughout the season, Johnson was a storm center. His own league's movement against him was buttressed by the antipathy of National League club owners. Johnson, the National League magnates charged, was exercising an undue influence over Garry Herrmann, chairman of the National Baseball Commission.

Comprising the commission were Johnson, National League President John Heydler and Herrmann. The latter, a former president of the National League, was friendly with Johnson, but National League club owners resented what they called the "domination" of the commission by Johnson, a man whose forceful personality brooked little resistance.

The festering troubles of the American League came to a head at the winter meeting in Chicago, when the two leagues met as separate units before uniting in the annual joint meeting.

Three of the eight American League club owners . . . Ruppert, Comiskey and Frazee . . . walked out of their league's meeting and, in a threat to secede from the league and join up with the National, sat in with the latter league's club owners.

From across the hall in the Congress Hotel where the meetings were being held, the five American League club owners, who were faithfully supporting Johnson, heard rumblings of an attempt on the part of the National League to take in Comiskey, Ruppert, and Frazee, forming a 12-club National League.

Griffith Seeks Way to Unite Warring Factions.

ANY SUCH ACT WOULD BE an attempt to freeze out the American League and Griffith and every other owner faithful to Johnson faced utter ruin. It was no less than an attempted revival of the old, expensive baseball wars that had marked the game at the turn of the century.

In an attempt to make peace, Griffith shuttled back and forth between the two league meetings, seeking some common ground for a settlement.

His old friend, Comiskey, Griffith called aside. "After all our early troubles with the American League, I'm surprised to see you sitting in with 'em," he told the White Sox owner. "You don't look so good to me in that company, Charley," Griffith added.

It was no use. Comiskey was intent on defeating Johnson by any means and, to effect that coup, was willing even to join up with his old National League enemies. Ruppert and Frazee were equally committed to pulling out of the American League. And the National League, similarly eager "to get even" with Johnson, was receiving the deserting American Leaguers with open arms, seemingly.

At Kansas City, meanwhile, the Association of Minor Leagues was meeting at the Muehlbach Hotel. With their course for a 12-club National League apparently set, the National Leaguers betook themselves to Kansas City in an attempt to enlist the support of the minor leagues.

Without that support, the National Leaguers knew no major league could exist. Only the league that was fortunate enough to have an agreement with the minors . . . chief source of player supply . . . could hope to win out in any war between the two big leagues. The National League hoped to extend its "freeze out" of the American League to include no dealings between the minors and the American.

Dispute Settled and Landis Becomes Baseball's Czar.

GRIFFITH, SCENTING THE NATIONAL LEAGUE'S plans, hied also to Kansas City for the Minor League meeting. There he encountered National Commission Chairman Garry Herrmann, long his friend.

"What do you intend to do, now that Ruppert and Comiskey and Frazee have left your league?" asked Herrmann.

"If it's war the National League wants, we'll give it to 'em," declared Griffith bravely—bravely, because he knew the American League was in no position to wage war with the richer National League.

"Why, Garry, the National League can't do this to us," went on Griffith. "We'll ruin your league. A 12-club league like you're planning is too bulky, too unwieldy. You'll have two clubs in most every city and you'll have three clubs in the same league in New York.

"Let Ruppert and Comiskey and Frazee skip to your league. We don't care. We've got a millionaire backer in Chicago who'll make Comiskey's park look like a henhouse, and we've lined up a man in Boston who can buy and sell Frazee. He's unpopular there, anyway, you know that. And we'll go into Pittsburgh, too, and steal the town away from the Pirates."

Griffith was surprised at his own imaginative powers, as he recited to Herrmann the American League's elaborate plans . . . plans that didn't exist. But his little speech had the desired effect.

"Wa-al, Griff," said Herrmann, looking guardedly about for eavesdroppers, "to tell you the truth, we don't want those three guys in our league. You're going to get 'em back."

Peace came to baseball a few weeks later. Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, of the Federal bench, who had achieved fame in 1912 by fearlessly fining the Standard Oil Co. $29,000,000, was tendered the job of baseball commissioner with czarist powers and at a $42,500 salary. Inter-league and intra-league strife was over.

Crisler Ready to Take Michigan Job

Tiger Coach May Succeed Fielding Yost

Michigan Offer Is Made More Attractive to Lure Princeton Mentor.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Feb. 8.—Fresh developments, it was learned from authoritative sources today, have revived the prospect that Herbert Orrin (Fritz) Crisler will leave Princeton to become head football coach at the University of Michigan.

It was learned that Crisler, if he goes to Ann Arbor, not only will replace Harry G. Kipke as gridiron mentor, but occupy a full professorship and ultimately step into the post of athletic director now occupied by Fielding H. Yost.

CRISLER.

At Princeton it was indicated Crisler's decision will be made known tomorrow and considered at a meeting of the university council of athletics.

Crisler side-stepped comment today, but Prof. Burnham H. Dell, Princeton's athletic director, told the Associated Press:

"Mr. Crisler is considering developments with respect to the offer from Michigan. It is my understanding he has had the matter under consideration for some time.

Contract Has Two Years.

"We are not aware that he has made any decision, nor have we any definite information at this time to make public.

"Mr. Crisler's contract with Princeton as athletic director and head football coach has two years more to run and that is a factor to be considered.

Michigan Sweetens Offer.

The Associated Press learned the status of Michigan's efforts to get Crisler had undergone sharp change within the past 24 hours. It came unexpectedly and on top of recent assurances from Crisler that, insofar as original overtures from Michigan were concerned, he had made up his mind to reject them. Only yesterday, from Princeton's inner circle, came word that Crisler positively would stick to Tigertown.

The inference to be gathered from latest developments was that Michigan had "sweetened" the proposition, with full faculty membership, as well as a definite offer of the athletic directorship. This involved speculation as to the tenure of Yost, who will be 67 years old in April and eligible for retirement in three more years. Yost has been at Michigan since 1901.

For some weeks Crisler has been among a half dozen men mentioned most prominently in connection with Michigan's search for Kipke's successor. Crisler has been at Princeton for six years. He was graduated in 1922 from Chicago, served seven years as assistant to Head Coach Amos Alonzo Stagg at his alma mater, and was head coach at Minnesota, 1930-31, before taking charge of the Tigers.

Fistic Fathers Draw Chalkline for Orange Beer Baron

New York, Feb. 8 (U.P.). — The Tony Galento-Harry Thomas fight scheduled in Madison Square Garden, February 18 will be called off unless Galento goes into serious training, Boxing Commissioner Brown said tonight.

"You can't be a bartender and an athlete at the same time, as far as I can see," Brown said, "and unless something unforseen occurs, the commission will withdraw official sanction of this bout at its regular meeting."

Galento, who owns a saloon in Orange, N. J., believes he can keep in better physical condition by living at home, working out at a local gymnasium and tending his bar, then he could in some out of the way training camp.

At its last meeting the commission ordered Galento to refrain from posing for photographers while quaffing foaming steins of beer and smoking cigars. Galento complied, and injected some of his own humor into the situation by posing with a bottle of milk and a lollipop.

Brown revealed that he had been in communication with Commission Chairman John J. Phelan, who agreed that Galento should not be allowed to fight in this State without proper conditioning.

"In fairness to the public," Brown said, "we feel that Galento should get himself in condition. He agreed to go to Madame Bey's camp at Summit, N. J., last Friday, but he was at the Garden that night, and when I talked to Matchmaker Al Weill Monday, Weill said he didn't know where Tony was training."

When Galento was informed that the commission was considering canceling the fight, he said he would go to a camp and train, but "I probably won't be in as good condition as if I stayed at home."

His manager, Joe Jacobs, defied the commission to call the bout off under threat of a legal suit. "They have no right to say where a man shall train," he said. "There are plenty of fighters who do all of their training at New York gymnasiums, and Tony works out daily in Parkview gym at Orange. I will sue the individual commissioners for damages." He later went into a conference with Promoter Mike Jacobs.

Riggs Enters Round Two

Buxby Also Advances at Palm Beach.

By the Associated Press.

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 8.—Robert Riggs swept into the second round of the invitational tennis tournament here this afternoon with an easy 6—2, 6—1 victory over Abraham Nesbitt, from Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Bill Hardie, youthful University of Miami player, was on the verge of an upset decision over Weston Painter, Minneapolis chopstroke artist. Hardie, former Miami High School player, won the first set, 6—4, and was leading in the second at 4—1.

Martin Buxby, Miami, seeded sixth in the tournament, disposed of Reeves Rutledges, Asheville, N. C., 6—1, 6—1.

In another match completed this afternoon, Vernon Marcum, Lakeland, defeated Roland Smith, London, England, 6-4, 6—2.

Lewis Duff, Montreal, and Charles Mattman, Miami, were tied at 6-all in another match, and Harris Everett, Jacksonville, was leading Louis Faquin, Miami, 4—3, in the first set.

Battles and Boss Talk Over Offer From Lou Little

Cliff Battles today will start a series of conferences that will determine his football future. The Redskins' star, who has been offered a $4,000 assistant coach's contract by Lou Little, of Columbia University, will arrive from Miami this afternoon.

He will immediately go into a session with Wash B. Williams, proprietor of the bottling firm which employs him in the off season. Battles must sever his connection with Williams if he moves to New York, where he would be on duty during both the spring and the fall.

His final decision will not be given until Battles confers with Owner George Marshall, who is due to return from the Pacific Coast on Monday. Marshall, who paid the Redskins' star $3,000 last year, will be asked to meet the $4,000 offer of Columbia.

If Battles succeeds in negotiating that pay raise he is expected to reject the Columbia offer in view of his off-season job with the Williams firm.

Battles was not in uniform during the Redskins' final barnstorming game at Miami last Sunday. An infected cheek bone kept him out of action after Miami physicians had warned him that an aggravation might spread the infection.

'Stormy Weather' Is Leading In Miami-Nassau Yacht Race

Last Year's Winner of Boat Classic Paces 13 Entries in Big Event; End Seen Today.

By the Associated Press.

Eighth across the starting line, Stormy Weather, footing fast on a starboard tack, moved to the front in the first 10 miles. The 54-foot jib-headed yawl, owned by Robert W. Johnson, of New York, was manned by Ducky Endt, veteran skipper, and seven crew members.

The racing yachts lined up nicely for the start except Sewanna, 56-foot schooner owned by Harrison Tweed, of Essex, Conn., which came too close to the line before the gun, had to luff up to give Winsome Too the right of way, and finally pulled across.

Sonny was the first across, a moment after the gun was fired at 11:55 a. m., Eastern standard time.

Other starts were Abennaki, a 50-foot schooner owned by H. M. Davock, of Detroit; the 26-foot Vandal, owned by W. T. Price, jr., of Miami; Agusta Verde, the scratch boat, a 79-foot schooner owned by Francis A. Martin, jr., of Nantucket, Mass. Caprice, 56-foot ketch owned by Julian J. Reiss, of New York; Naomi, 37-foot ketch owned by Charles Cox, of Shelbourn, Nova Scotia, and flying the Canadian flag; Caroline, 37-foot ketch, owned by H. C. Bowen, of East Greenwich, Conn., and St. Clair 37-foot sloop owned by H. Summerfield of Toledo Ohio.

The racing fleet beat into a 17-mile headwind in the first tack toward Great Isaac Island over the 184 nautical miles course. The craft will sail through the northwest New Providence Channel and around Great Stirrup Cay to Nassau Harbor. Officials expected the first yacht to reach Nassau late tomorrow afternoon.

Sington Injured In Auto Crash

Dalton, Ga., Feb. 8 (AP).—Freddie Sington, former University of Alabama football star and now a professional baseball player, was injured slightly in a motor car accident near here today.

A hospital attache said Sington was treated and dismissed.

Sington is employed off-seasons by an automobile company in Atlanta. He is a member of the Chattanooga Club, of the Southern Baseball Association, and played last year for Washington, in the American League.

Yankees Release 'Blubber' Malone

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—The Yankees announced today that Pat (Blubber) Malone, veteran relief pitcher, had been given his unconditional release. Malone, a veteran of 16 years in organized baseball, 10 in the major leagues, said he still hoped to catch on with Detroit or Boston and that he had several minor league offers under consideration.

The Yanks also announced the signing of Joe Vance, rookie pitcher, while the Giants gave out the news that they had received the signed contract of their biggest pitcher, Walter Brown.

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—Bobby Dunkelberger, youthful player from High Point, N. C., is planning an intensive golfing invasion of Europe, the United States Golf Association revealed today.

Western Five Wins, 24-20

Ties Eastern for Lead; Presidents Bow.

In the semiprivacy of Tech gym yesterday, Western again tied Eastern for the interhigh basketball lead by dealing Central its sixth straight series spanking, 24-20. In the opening contest of the twin bill which attracted only 150 students, Tech weathered a game come-back by Wilson and whipped the Presidents, 34-28.

Western and Eastern now have records of five victories and one loss and probably will share first place until they meet on February 23.

The Mount Pleasant quintet which has been dropping close decisions with irksome regularity appeared on its way to success in the last period when Archie Panago, its clever guard, staged a one-man attack to whittle a substantial Western advantage to 22-20 with 4½ minutes remaining of play. But Bob Holloran, Georgetown's forward, tossed in a remarkable one-hand shot while traveling at top speed and apparently shattered Central's morale. Neither team was able to score in the last 4 minutes.

Western Leads.

Western jumped into an imposing lead in the first half due to accurate sharpshooting by Irving Needle and Bob Custer. The pair contributed two field goals each to help Western take a 7-3 advantage at quarter and 17-8 at half. In the third period, Len Sokol, Central forward, socked the cords with two rapid shots to reduce the Western margin to 20-12, and then his substitute, "Curly" Orenstein, did the same after Len Stanton had dumped in a follow shot for Western. After a Western time out, Panago caused a marked rise in the pulses of Western rooters by two baskets, but then Holloran halted the rally when he dribbled the length of the floor to make the best shot of the day.

Custer and Stanton shouldered the bulk of the winners' offense with 7 and 6 points, respectively. Panago, of Central, was high scorer with 8.

A Confusing Game.

The Tech-Wilson fuss was a bit confusing with first one then another registering points in wholesale quantity. Tech started out like it was going to clinch the victory in the first period, running up 10-3 lead, which was lengthened to 17-6 early in the next quarter. But Wilson dumped in 12 points in a row while holding Tech helpless and left the court with an 18-17 lead at intermission.

Dave Maloney, Wilson guard, continued the spurt by heaving in the first field goal of the third stanza,

Tiger Club Spurns Ballyhoo, All Sign

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 8 (AP).—Walter O. Briggs, president of the Detroit Baseball Club, announced today all players had been signed for the coming season.

Briggs expressed gratification that contract negotiations had been completed "much earlier than usual" and said he felt it presaged a successful season for the Tigers.

Rough Play Marks Tight Cage Contest

By Jack Munhall.

St. John's crack team virtually clinched the scholastic basketball championship last night turning back Eastern, 23-18, in a great defensive duel at Catholic University.

Thirty-five hundred spectators, the second largest crowd of the season, filled every inch of the spacious gym and overflowed along the sidelines to watch the spirited Johnnies annex their fifteenth victory of the campaign and preserve their undefeated scholastic record.

Since Eastern is the present leader and favorite to capture the interhigh series, St. John's, by its triumph, has a clear claim to the city title. It already has beaten Western, co-leader with Eastern in the public school league, and is not scheduled to meet either again, Eastern having declined St. John's offer of a return game.

Shows Stiff Defense.

Also by the hard-fought victory, St. John's is assured of a trip to Chicago and the National Catholic Tournament, and it certainly deserves the chance, for its game comeback last night erased any doubts that it is tops in Washington. A stiff defense and a last-period rally which produced 10 points and overcame an Eastern lead were the big factors of the victory.

The game was rough throughout due to the closest guarding that has been seen in high school ranks all year. Both teams missed more shots than usual, but it was because the players were unable to get "set" and not because their tosses lacked customary accuracy.

The intense guarding was most noticeable in the third period, in which only two points were made, but that basket whipped in by Joe Gallagher, Cadet guard, cut down what had been the largest margin held by either team up to that time. Eastern, sparked by Russ Lombardy, hopped to an 8-5 advantage in the first quarter, but St. John's gradually warmed up and it was soon apparent to all that the game would be decided by no more than a few points either way.

Gallagher Rated Tops.

Gallagher, the best performer on the court, led St. John's forces in their tough grind to the van. He opened the third quarter with a remarkable one-handed heave that boosted the Johnnies out in front, 9-8, the first time they had led. Russ Lombardy immediately retaliated for the Lincoln Park team and from then on until the very end neither team was able to hold more than a 2-point margin.

Trailing 15-13 as the final 8-minute period opened, St. John's engineered the most prolific scoring streak of the game. It started when Jim Giebel, tall center, broke away and counted on a snowbird and Francis Battiste swished one in from under the basket. Ralph Matera temporarily halted the barrage which was to follow with a neat set shot from sidecourt, but Battiste dropped in a foul and Gallagher registered a basket on a clever feint and quick dribble to give St. John's an imposing 22-17 lead with 2½ minutes to go.

Rough and Tumble.

Despite many frantic shots, some of which were close, some not, Eastern was unable to score from the floor although "Soup" Hancock slipped in a charity throw after a double foul with St. John's Battiste. The action between Battiste and Hancock was the only time tempers flared in the torrid contest. The teams played hard, but unusually clean at all times.

However, there was plenty of rough and tumble tactics, the bulk of which was supplied by St. John's Jimmy Mulvihill and Eastern's Lombardy, whose individual duel was better than advertised. Lombardy also was Eastern's foremost point gatherer, ramming in four field goals which gave him 8 points, the highest total of any losing player.

To single out any one player on either team as its star would be taking undue credit from the other four. Every member of both squads acquitted himself nobly. Gallagher, whose swiftness of foot amazed the audience, was St. John's point leader, garnering four baskets, but the passing of Mulvihill, Giebel, Battiste and Swagart made at least two of them possible. Following Gal-

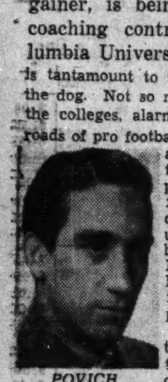
Infantry Marches to Victory in Key West Purse at Hialeah Park

This Morning WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

Cliff Battles, professional football's greatest ground-gainer, is being offered a coaching contract by Columbia University and that is tantamount to the man biting the dog. Not so many years ago the colleges, alarmed by the inroads of pro football, wrangled an agreement on the part of the pros to refrain from signing college stars until they had been graduated. Now the colleges are making passes at a pro star.



POVICH

It is no credit to pro football that a college can interest a star of Battles' stature in quitting the championship team of the league. It's a striking commentary on the low salaries that obtain in the National Professional League when a tender of a $4,000 coaching contract even gains the consideration of such as Battles.

He was an all-league halfback, in case you have forgotten, and was one of the league's more spectacular ball carriers. Yet he was playing for the Redskins for only $3,000 for the season. That kind of money won't keep the big-shot stars in the league. It behooves the pro football club owners to step up their wages or lose their attractions to the sponsors of so-called amateur football.

The national professional league wage scale is no incentive for the star football player, particularly the lineman, to adopt professional football as a career. At the first sign of a decently paying job he is apt to hang up his uniform and let the game shift for itself. If a rebellions against professional football wages ever starts, it will start among the linemen.

Battles, at $3,000, was a highly paid back, and inasmuch as backs are paid far higher salaries than linemen, it is fairly obvious that the gents who play with their noses on the scrimmage line do not draw wages in the upper brackets. Turk Edwards, Redskins' captain and outstanding tackle in the league, drew only $250 a game. There were other linemen who played for $125 per game. With 11 games constituting the league season, the professional football players will never qualify as rich men.

It is no surprise that canny Lou Little, Columbia's head coach, seeks the services of Battles as his backfield coach. Lou Little was at the helm of Georgetown teams when Battles was running wild for West Virginia Wesleyan against Georgetown, Navy and other big Eastern colleges. "He's the best back I ever hope to see," Little remarked, in tribute to the streaking blond ball carrier.

Battles, in fact, was always a coach in the Redskins' backfield. With all due respect to Quarterback Riley Smith, Battles was a powerful figure in the Redskins' strategy. When he was incapacitated by an infected leg at the start of the season, Battles was constantly consulted by Head Coach Ray Flaherty on the development of the squad.

In the light of Battles' value to the Redskins, there isn't much chance that George Marshall will permit Columbia to lure his star away if only $1,000 is the difference in offers. Marshall quakes at the thought of a 1938 Redskin team that would be minus Battles. Without Battles to draw an equal share of the attention of the defense, Sammy Baugh and his passes would not be 50 per cent as effective as last season.

With the return of General Manager Jack Espey to Washington, the low-down on the Redskins' hapless barnstorming venture into the West and South is available. The tour cost Marshall a fancy sum with the debit not yet fully computed. Contrary to popular belief, the players did not take a loss.

Under the arrangement, the players were to draw the same per-game salaries that they received during the regular season, plus all expenses. They were paid for performing in four games. But the expense of the cross-country jaunt to San Francisco, the two weeks spent in Texas, and the journey into Florida, was far higher than the guarantees obtained by Marshall.

At San Francisco against the Bears the Redskins drew an $11,000 gate which covered Marshall's $4,000 guarantee. At Dallas they played to $11,000, and Marshall drew $5,000 out of the proceedings. At Houston the gate was $10,000, with Marshall getting a $4,000 guarantee. At Miami, where the gate was $14,000, Marshall received $5,000. His auditors have not yet determined the amount of Marshall's loss.

But Espey reports that the tour would have been a huge financial success were it not for the rain which marked all of the contests except the Miami affair. For every game, the Redskins drew a higher advance sale than for any game in Washington last season except the Green Bay Packers contest. At Frisco the advance sale was $8,000, but only $3,000 worth of customers bought tickets on the day of the game. In Dallas and Houston it was the same story.

MuchoGusto, Big Favorite, Is Poor Third

Lady Higloss Beats Him Soundly for Place in Feature.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Feb. 8.—Suddenly regaining top form after finishing far back in the Miami Beach Handicap, Infantry, from the Chicago-owned Millsdale Stable, turned in a topnotch performance to win the Key West Purse here today. The Chance Shot gelding, a smart performer in some of the Northern stakes last year, won by three-quarters of a length with Sammy Renick easing up in the closing strides.

Lady Higloss, representing Miss A. Doris, also showed improvement to take the place by four lengths. Mucho Gusto, 11 to 20 favorite from the stable of Ramsey & Coppage, burned up thousands of dollars by winding up a soundly beaten third. Tatterdemalion, victim of a poor break, was fourth, and Thorson, a conspicuous campaigner in New York last year, brought up the rear in his first outing since November 20.

Of the five starters, all but Lady Higloss are included in the list of 38 horses that remained eligible for the $50,000 Widener Cup of March 5 after payment, on January 31, of the additional subscription fee of $100, in keeping with the conditions of the mile and a quarter fixture. The process of weeding out the horses not worthy of a crack at champion War Admiral is now on in earnest. There were 78 horses in the original November nomination list.

Favorite Falters.

Mucho Gusto, carrying 122 pounds as compared to Infantry's 116 and Lady Higloss' 111, broke in motion and took a daylight lead. However, the favorite gave way to Lady Higloss and Infantry near the far turn. Lady Higloss took a length lead on Infantry, but Renick had a lot of horse under him and was in no hurry. After straightening for home, Infantry rallied. Without being fully extended, he gained command and won very easily.

In one of the prettiest duels of the season, Flyahead and Early Settler came down to the wire a head apart as named in the one mile seventh contest. Flyahead, showing rare gameness, led all the way. He was joined by Early Settler after the first quarter mile and the pair raced like a team all the way to the judges, with Sterling Young, on the winner, depriving Porter Roberts of a riding triple. Buttermilk was third, a length and a half behind. The victor was an $8.30 choice.

Today's card opened with another victory for the popular Woolford Farm Stable of Herbert M. Woolf. Unerring, coupled with Quick Change and favorite at slightly better than 2 to 1, carried the Kansas City, Mo., banner first home by three lengths in the three-furlong test for maiden 2-year-old fillies. Sister Reigh, a long shot, headed Catechism for second money. Unerring got away with the leaders and was hustled to the front by "Buddy" Haas. Drawing away in easy fashion, the daughter of Insco finished in 0:34 3-5. Sister Reigh was the chief contender all the way.

Slump Away Fast.

Several days ago, L. E. Ogle started Slump in a race in which the gelding was made favorite. With Ralph Eccard riding, Slump broke fast, but dropped right out of it and finished out of the picture. O. R. Ferrell claimed the horse on that occasion for $2,000. Slump started in the new silks today and won the second race in easy fashion to return $19.50. And L. E. Ogle was on the job to claim Slump back again for $2,500.

With Porter Roberts up, Slump was hustled into a wide lead after being well placed in the early running. The gelding had no trouble holding Monument safe to win by a length and a half. Prince Sador was a poor third, with the favored Sir Quest fifth after getting to the front earlier in the running.

Apprentice Sammy Williams had the thrill of winning a photo duel over the veteran Eddie Arcaro in the third race. Williams booted the $23.30-for-$2 shot Walter Morton first home, while Arcaro, after setting the early pace astride Dreel, had to be satisfied with the place, a length and a half behind Ladfield, the favorite. Walter Morton, raced well up from the start, caught Dreel after turning for home and outlasted his rival. Ladfield's stretch rally came too late to seriously menace the first two horses.

Perlette, favorite for the fourth, was no match for the $8.30-for-$2 hazard My Kin. With Freddy Scheih failing to prove of much help to Perlette, the filly was beaten two lengths while taking the place by a half length from Tonianna. Perlette overtook the fast starting Lull at the first turn, but her reign was short-lived. My Kin dashed past the choice around the bend and drew away without being extended through the stretch.

For the second time during the day, a horse claimed out of his last race made good in new silks when B. H. Jackson's Cascapedia easily accounted for the purse in the fifth event, mile and a quarter test for grade "C" horses. Porter Roberts was astride both horses. Cascapedia, taken from Kenneth T. Dawes for $3,500, ran to his recent sizzling workout and showed more early foot than usual. He cut down Galsun's early lead, assumed command entering the stretch and clicked by four lengths to pay the talent $5.40.

UNERRING, away alertly, was in close quarters for a quarter mile, then moved to the front as though much the best. SISTER REIGH went into a brief lead after a sixteenth and held on well, but was no match for the winner. CATECHISM broke sluggishly, settled into stride and finished with a rush through the final furlongs.

SECOND RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 2:30. Off 2:30½. Winner, O. R. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SLUMP, $19.50, $9.80, $7.90; MONUMENT, $6.80, $4.40; PRINCE SADOR, $6.90.

SLUMP, under stout restraint in the early stages, moved to the front with a rush on the stretch turn, opened up a big lead, but then faltered through the stretch and was ridden out briskly to maintain his lead. MONUMENT, slow to get going, began to better his position in the last three furlongs and finished with a belated rush. PRINCE SADOR, a forward contender on the inside for the entire trip, responded to punishment in the last furlong and held FAUST safe.

Daily Double, Unerring and Slump, Paid $97.00.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:00. Off 3:09½. Winner, W. Hirschensohn's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WALTER MORTON, $23.30, $8.30, $4.20; DREEL, $6.80, $4.60; LADFIELD, $3.20.

WALTER MORTON followed the pace well up on the inside in the early running under slight restraint, saved much ground entering the stretch and responded gamely to punishment to outlast DREEL in the final drive. The latter outbroke his field, displayed high speed, but bore out on the stretch turn, closed gamely when straightened out and was wearing the winner down. LADFIELD, rated off the pace and going wide all the way, finished gamely through the stretch under punishment and outlasted TUTTICURIO.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. fillies and mares. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:30. Off 3:32½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MY KIN, $8.30, $4.20, $3.20; PERLETTE, $3.70, $3.00; TONIANNA, $4.30.

MY KIN, under light restraint in the early running, bettered her position steadily on the outside, shook off PERLETTE at her leisure and won in hand. PERLETTE, away forwardly, followed the leaders closely on the outside until leaving the backstretch, took command at her leisure, drew out while saving ground and continued determinedly when challenged, but Scheih rode a weak finish. TONIANNA, a keen factor in the run down the backstretch, was pinched back leaving the backstretch, then followed the pace under steadying restraint until straightened into the stretch and came again, but could not reach the leaders.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,000. Class C. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:01. Off 4:03. Winner, B. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CASCAPEDIA, $5.40, $3.30, $2.40; GALSUN, $3.90, $2.80; KNIGHT WARRIOR, $2.30.

CASCAPEDIA, going in his best form, improved his position steadily on the outside after entering the backstretch and easily disposed of GALSUN when called upon and won with speed in reserve. GALSUN, hustled to the front going to the first turn, drew out into a big lead, but was no match for the winner when challenged. KNIGHT WARRIOR broke well, but was gradually taken back in the first half mile, followed the pace under restraint until midway around the lower turn, responded gamely to urging, but Williams was unable to do him justice.

SIXTH RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,200. The Key West. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:33. Off 4:34½. Winner, Milladale Stable's b. g. (5), by Chance Shot—Labayonette. Trained by A. G. Robertson. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. INFANTRY, away forwardly, followed the pace under steadying restraint in the run down the backstretch on the outside, moved up with determination when called upon, shook off LADY HIGLOSS at his leisure and won with speed in reserve. LADY HIGLOSS, going closer to the pace than usual, took command leaving the backstretch, made a game effort when challenged, but was no match for the winner. MUCHO GUSTO, quickest to begin, displayed speed for three furlongs, but never threatened the leaders.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:03. Off 5:04½. Winner, Mrs. K. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLYAHEAD, $8.30, $4.30, $3.10; EARLY SETTLER, $3.40, $3.10; BUTTERMILK, $3.10.

FLYAHEAD, quickest to begin, drew clear in the opening quarter mile, set a steady pace while saving the most ground, responded with determination when the final issue came, and outlasted EARLY SETTLER. Latter broke a trifle tardily from the outside, moved into contention swiftly while circling the field in the early running, went in close attendance of the leader in the last half mile, but could not improve his position. BUTTERMILK, on outside most of the trip, gained steadily through the stretch and outstayed STEEPLETOP.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:34. Off 5:37½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLEET STEP, $18.40, $8.30, $4.40; TRANSMUTING, $14.90, $6.00; MELODY MAID, $3.00.

FLEET STEP, pinched back in the run to the first turn, gradually improved his position while slipping through on the inside in the final six furlongs and wore TRANSMUTING down in the stretch run. TRANSMUTING, rushed to the front rounding the first turn, and showing the most early speed, bore out entering the stretch, which probably cost him the race. MELODY MAID broke forwardly and was taken under slight restraint and back in the early running, moved up stoutly on the stretch turn, but was carried out and lost ground.

Seabiscuit's Run Cheers Backers

Los Angeles, Feb. 8 (AP).—Seabiscuit, co-favorite with Pompoon for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap March 5, cheered his winter book followers today with another impressive workout.

Not raced since the Pimlico meeting last fall, the "Biscuit" was clocked in 0:45 4-5 for the half, 1:13 2-5 for three-quarters, 1:25 3-5 for 7 furlongs, and was eased up to the mile mark in 1:41 2-5.

Owner C. S. Howard may enter Seabiscuit in the San Carlos Handicap a week from Saturday if the impost is not more than 130 pounds he will carry in the $100,000 classic.

Lucas Meets Turiello in Arena Ring Feature Monday

SAYLOR, OF WESTERN, MISSES A SHOT.

Defeated Jessurum in Recent Bout; Lucas Tough Opponent.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Either Goldie Ahearn and Eddie Borden, of Ring Magazine, are working hand in glove, or the local matchmaker has stumbled on a couple of good matches to be presented here within a month.

Next Monday night Herr Ahearn has Saverio Turiello coming in to box Johnny Lucas at Turner's Palace of Paddywack; and the following week his plans call for a match between Leo Rodak and our own Lou Gevinson. Both look good on paper and should be just as good in the ring.

We mention Mr. Borden only because in the current issue of "Ring" he gives both Turiello and Rodak prominent billing. The Italian is rated No. 5 on the welterweight scale, and Rodak, a veteran, is listed second on the featherweight ladder. Neither Lucas nor Gevinson is rated, but each can take care of himself once the bell clangs. They loom as worthy opponents for their more prominent rivals.

Sicilia vs. Archibald.

As if this were not enough, Herr Ahearn lets it be known that he is angling for an Armanda Sicilia—Joey Archibald bout February 28, and intends to follow it up with one involving Ivan Nedomatsky and Steve Mamakos. And while the latter has a distinct club-fight odor, it can't be dismissed with a mere shrug of the shoulders. It'll give your leaky ticker an unpleasant evening if past performances of the boys are a criterion of what they'll do that particular night.

Turiello, who was born in the old country and appeared in 17 foreign clubs, has a record that reads like a Democratic roll call. He decisioned Cocoa Kid twice, did the same against Andre Jessurun; whipped Frankie Cinque three times, and got the nod over Phil Furr, Tony Falco, Johnny Jadick, Bobby Allen, Eddie Connelly and Johnny Clinton. He did all of that in this country.

Beats Enrico Venturi.

On foreign shores he decisioned Enrico Venturi twice; Eddie Brink three times, and got a draw with Pedro Montanez. A pretty fair record for a man who has gone out of his way to meet and beat heavier, and, allegedly, better opponents. He's lost fights—but not before giving the other man fits and giving the fans full value for their money. Borden isn't far wrong, if at all, in ranking him as prominently as he does.

Lucas is a better-than-average craftsman who can spike Signor Turiello's guns if he is at his best. He has appeared here before, and, if you recall, acquitted himself honorably. He'll be a good match for the Italian.

Rodak Is Clever.

Rodak is out of boxing's old school, a skilled campaigner with a bag of tricks at his command and dynamite in both fists. He is a great favorite around Chicago, and is scheduled to fight in New York in the near future. His manager, Nate Lewis, is in the big town at the moment negotiating for matches.

Gevinson, not only willing but eager to meet the best in his class, may bump into another Tartar in Rodak, and may have to start another "comeback" campaign after the bout. But Lou feels that he'll take the Windy City winger in stride and possibly put him among the daisies. How Gevinson will win, if he does, remains to be seen, but don't sell Rodak short.

Archibald seems willing to tackle Sicilia after declining a fat guarantee for a return bout with Gevinson. The potent Providence puncher was offered a cool two grand for a rematch with the District dynamiter, but discovered he had a previous engagement.

The Mamakos-Nedomatsky bout may head an "all-collegiate" card. "All" is a misnomer in this instance, inasmuch as Mamakos never saw a college, unless in passing, and other proposed bouts involve only one collegian. Ray Matulewicz, former Duke light-heavyweight, and Norment Quarles, who campaigned for the University of Virginia, are slated to grace the program.

Harry Raskin and Bob Tow are home from New York, and will spend a few weeks resting. Tow's draw with Red Burman, while disappointing to his supporters, wasn't bad at all when you consider that the Alexandrian went most of the distance with a crippled right hand.

Raskin was genuinely worried about the injury when they were here for a brief visit a week before the fight, but thought his charge might be able to get by with it. Tow's popularity in the big town is as great as ever, however, and he is wanted for a bout with Al McCoy, in Boston, and has a chance to appear in England if he wants to.

lagher in points was Giebel with five and Battiste with four.

A feature of the game was the defensive skill exhibited, in particular by Clint Quantrille and Lee Lusby, Eastern's center and guard. Quantrille played more than a half with three personal fouls against him and despite the fact that another would eject him from the fray managed to limit Giebel, St. John's sharpshooting center, to only five markers. Lusby incurred his third personal midway in the third period and also finished the game.

Steele Stops Bob Turner

Steele weighed 158; Turner, 162. The knockout came two minutes and 17 seconds after the fight started.

Coming out of his corner with a rush, Steele sparred with the Virginia fighter, then shot a right to the chin which floored Turner for a nine-count after the fight was barely 15 seconds old.

After Turner regained his feet, Steele rushed in with lefts and rights to the head and Turner again went down, this time for a count of eight. He no sooner had risen than Steele floored him a third time, again with lefts and rights to the head.

Turner, who recently took a ten-round decision from Carmen Barth, landed no more than two solid blows in the brief set-to. Steele meets Barth in a title fight at Cleveland February 19. The right with which the champion first floored Turner far from carried the best of Steele's punching power.

The crowd of 2,500 started booing the minute Turner hit the floor the first time and continued for more than the ten minutes. The announcer was unable to introduce the principals in the semi-final, which followed the main bout, because of the clamor.

Brig. Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the New York State athletic commission, who witnessed the bout, said Turner's share of the purse would be withheld and an immediate investigation of the fight would be launched by the commission.

Howard Loses.

Baltimore, Feb. 8.—Howard's title hopes were tonight jolted when Morgan won a 52-51 victory. The Bisons staged a rally in the second half, but with 45 seconds to go, Lampkins connected on a corner shot to lead Morgan to victory. Morgan led at the half, 28-25.

Colonials, Cardinals See Action Tonight

Powerful Westminster Quintet Is Opposition for George Washington; Wayne University of Detroit Is Foe of Catholic U.

By Bob Garrison.

George Washington and Catholic University basketball teams return to action tonight after absences from local courts during the past two weeks.

The Colonials will clash with the Westminster five from New Wilmington, Pa., long one of the better clubs in the Pittsburg area. The Cardinals return to action against Wayne University of Detroit.

It will be the first home game for George Washington since it defeated Elon way back in early January. Since then it has played five games on the road, winning from West Virginia and Wayne and losing to Long Island, Toledo and Loyola of Chicago.

The game is set for Tech High at 8:15. A preliminary game between the Colonial Frosh and Maryland Frosh will precede it.

For Catholic University's nose-diving Cardinals tonight's game with Wayne, formerly the University of Detroit, will mark their first contest since they defeated Western Maryland before midsemester examinations set in last month. The Brookland basketers have won but two in ten games. They play in the C. U. Gym at 8:15.

George Washington will be without the services of Capt. Tommy O'Brien, set-shot specialist, who is still nursing a badly sprained ankle, sustained in the Wayne game at Detroit last Thursday. It was largely due to his absence from the games that the Colonials fell victims of Loyola and Toledo, it is felt, and his services will be greatly missed tonight.

Westminster, coached by Grover Washabaugh, will present a veteran team that has won six of nine hard games this season. Villanova and Pitt, two of the better court teams of the East, have fallen victims of the Titans.

Last season the Pennsylvanians defeated the Colonials by one point at New Wilmington and lost by four to the local club in a return game here.

Coach Forrest "Fod" Cotton plans to start the same five men who were in the Cardinal line-up at the close of the Western Maryland game. Led by Vic Miller, who will be at one of the forward posts, the team includes Joe Guyon, forward; Joe Crowczel, center, Wayne Ambrose and Irish Carroll, guards.

Wayne has won eight out of ten games to date, having lost only to C. C. N. Y. in New York and to George Washington in Detroit. The Wayne five will meet the Colonials in a return game Saturday night before returning home.

Favorites Win Opening Tests in Handball Play

Ranking doubles teams, with one minor exception, encountered little difficulty winning their first starts as the District of Columbia A. A. U. handball tourney got under way on the Central "Y" court last night.

Continuing where he left off in Monday night singles play, young Walter Engelhardt teamed with Art Wondrack to eliminate the veteran Woodward-Vineburg combine, 21-9, 21-16.

The lone Jewish Community Center entry was eliminated when the Schulman-Gravitz team bowed to Payne-Berman, 16-21, 21-13, 12-21. Schwartz-Pearlman, the ranking combine, had little difficulty trouncing the Wendlandt-Klein team, 21-15, 21-16, while the Nash-Benjamin duo scored an easy 21-12, 21-11 victory over the Myers-Newman combine.

The Goldstein-Mangan singles match, postponed from Monday night, was an extra feature of last night's play, with the veteran Mangan bowing to his younger opponent, 10-21, 21-19, 13-21.

Hall and Hutchison Are Billiards Victors

Doc Hall and Graham Hutchison were victorious last night in the three-cushion billiards tournament at the Royal Parlors. Hall defeated Crowder, 35 to 31, in 63 innings, after each had a high run of 5. Hutchison won over George Lamborn by a 35-to-30 count in 87 innings. They also had high runs of 5.

but then Tech, sparked by the deadly shooting of diminutive Moe Tannebum and the great passing of Moe Schulman, rolled up 10 consecutive points to grab a 27-20 lead. Charley Findely stopped the barrage of Tech points with a pair of charity tosses, but Charley Kendall sewed up Tech's victory with a pair of baskets.

Eli Blank, Tech's classy little guard, led the attack with 10 points, and Vince DeLeon, center, added 8 more. Wilson's scoring was well divided between Findely, Dave Maloney, Bill Hawksworth and Don MacDonald, who tallied 7, 6, 5, and 5 points in that order.

Olympic Boycott Sought by China

Shanghai (Wednesday), Feb. 9 (U.P.).—The Chinese National Athletic Federation announced today that it would request all nations to boycott the 1940 Olympic games in Tokyo.

The federation asserted that "Japan has declared she intends to drive the white races from China—on the very eve of the next world's Olympics."

Jean Bauer Beaten by 'Dark Horse' in Palm Beach Tourney

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 8.—The steady stroking of 17-year-old Laddie Irwin, of Montclair, N. J. brought her an unexpected one up victory today over comely Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., in the first round of match play in the Palm Beach Women's Golf Tournament.

Making her first start in winter competition, the New Jersey junior champion, held a three up lead at the turn. But the highly favored Miss Bauer evened the match by taking the first three holes on the home nine, and went one up when she birdied the 16th.

Miss Irwin again squared matters with a 12-foot putt for a birdie on the seventeenth and closed out the match on the final hole with a par four while Miss Bauer dubbed a chip shot.

Other favorites advanced handily.

Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., swamped Mrs. Charles Harbaugh, of Cleveland, 7 and 6, with a three-under-par card for the 12 holes. She was qualifying medalist yesterday.

Sally Guth, of Webster Grove, Mo., defeated Mrs. E. F. Cary, of Minneapolis, 4 and 3, and will meet Miss Hemphill tomorrow.

Marion Miley, of Fort Pierce, Fla., another favorite, eliminated Audrey Phipps, of Westbury, N. Y., 2 up, and tomorrow will play Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco, 7 and 6 winner over Marion McDougall, of Portland, Oreg.

Mrs. Jane Cothran Jameson, of West Palm Beach, defeated Mrs. Joseph Lawlor, of New Rochelle, N. Y., 6 and 4. Her opponent in the semifinals will be Lillian Zech, of Chicago, who defeated Mrs. H. D. Sterrett, of Hutchison, Kans., in a 19-hole battle.

Helen Hockenjos, of Lake Hopatcong, N. J., eliminated Mrs. Philip Hill, of London, England, 3 and 1, and will play Miss Irwin tomorrow.

Textiles Set Post-War Peak Consumption

Record-Breaking Use of Cotton Chief Item in Large Volume.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 8. — Record-breaking use of cotton in the United States last year lifted the country's total consumption of leading textile fibers to the largest figure for any year since the war, the Textile Economics Bureau reported today. Consumption of cotton, wool, rayon, silk and linen was figured at 4,374,900,000 pounds against 4,270,300,000 in 1936 and 2,946,900,000 in 1932.

Unprecedented use of cotton in the first nine months of the year, it was pointed out, offset a drastic decline in textile activity in the latter part of 1937. Cotton use rose to 3,630,400,000 pounds from 3,470,200,000 the preceding year and was 42,700,000 above the previous peak in 1927.

Wool, silk, rayon and linen use all were lower for the year, with rayon consumption placed at 301,500,000 pounds against 322,600,000 in 1936 and 155,300,000 in 1932. Wool use fell to 353,900,000 pounds from 383,800,000 in 1936 and compared with 230,100,000 in 1932, around the depression bottom. Rayon use, amounting to 6.9 per cent of the total fiber consumed, for the first time in 17 years failed to increase its relative position. Silk at 1.2 per cent of the total was the lowest for that fiber since 1921, the publication said.

An increase in rayon deliveries last month following the sharp year-end decline was shown, raising the publication's index to 374 per cent of the 1923-25 average compared with 240 in December.

Lead and Zinc Prices Cut by Producers

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—Faced with what were described as unfavorable trade statistics, domestic producers today reduced the price of both lead and zinc, sending the former to its 1937-38 low reached last December 16 and the latter to its cheapest figure since July, 1936.

In the case of lead the reduction was $3 a ton to the basis of 4.75 cents a pound, delivered in New York. The zinc quotation was dropped $5 a ton to 4.75 cents a pound, East St. Louis. The cut in the lead price followed two boosts in January.

General Motors Sales Lower in January

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—Sales of General Motors Corporation to dealers in the United States and Canada, together with overseas shipments, totaled 94,267 units in January, compared with 160,444 in December and 103,668 in January last year. In November the aggregate was 195,136 units.

January sales to consumers in the United States amounted to 63,069 units, compared with 89,682 in December and 92,998 in January a year ago. Sales to dealers in the same month totaled 56,938, compared with 108,232 in December and 70,901 in January last year.

Shipbuilding Gains in Month

Shipping under construction at yards in the United States jumped 107,875 tons during January due to the addition of 16 vessels aggregating 140,445 gross tons, according to the American Bureau of Shipping. On February 1 a total of 91 vessels aggregating 390,990 gross tons were under construction according to the bureau's specifications, compared with 92 vessels for a total of 283,115 gross tons on January 1, 1938, and 80 vessels for 177,355 gross tons on February 1, 1937.

There was also under construction a total of 16,865 additional tons of shipping to make total work under way on February 1, 1938, 407,855 tons compared with 300,680 tons on January 1, 1938. The large increase was due to the ordering of 12 tankers of 11,500 tons each by Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

Socony Orders 2 Tankers.

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. announced yesterday the award to Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation of a contract for construction of two tankers at a cost of around $4,500,000.

The oil tankers, of a design similar to the standard type this company has used since 1930, will be built at the Sparrow's Point, Md., plant of Bethlehem.

Wheat Prices Advance With Export Sales

Day's Purchases Total 750,000 Bushels of U. S. Winter Wheat.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 8.—Running upward in rivalry with the New York stock market, Chicago wheat prices soared 1¼ cents rise today, and at the last held all the gain.

Added impetus for the action of wheat values came from enlargement of export demand for wheat from North America, with overseas purchases totaling 750,000 bushels or more, chiefly United States hard winter wheat. Incidentally, however, Australia captured the lion's share of export business, disposing today of 1,700,000 bushels of wheat to Great Britain.

Chicago wheat futures closed ⅞ to 1¼ cents above yesterday's finish; May, 93⅝ to 93¾; July, 91⅝ to 91¾. Corn, ⅝ to 1¼ up; May, 59⅞ to 60; July, 60¾. Oats at ⅛ decline to ¼ advance. Rye unchanged to 1 cent bulge, and provisions 2 cents to 17 cents down.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Advance Briskly With Building, Steel, Motors and Metal Shares Leading.

New York, Feb. 8.—Financial and commodity markets turned about and, in more active trading, prices advanced along nearly all fronts. Stock prices moved up gently in early trading and added more ground in the afternoon, closing with gains of 1 to 3 points for active issues in a larger turnover. Dollars were firmer among the foreign exchanges, but United States bonds were mixed. May wheat closed 1⅛ cents higher at 93¾ cents a bushel.

It required two or three hours of milling around for the stock market to make up its mind, but the firmness of the tone in the early trading promoted an advance in the afternoon which lifted the prices for nearly all stocks. The favorite industrial issues climbed 1 to 3 points. Steel, Chrysler, Bethlehem, Anaconda, Westinghouse, duPont, Manville, Kennecott, Smelters, Nickel, General Electric and General Motors gave the market a strong appearance. All the metal and building share divisions were strong.

Farm implement shares profited from the hurry in Congress to shove through the farm aid bill, which would enable farmers to spend a great deal more money to produce larger crops to be held in storage at the Treasury's expense. Case rose 3 points and Deere and Harvester moved up about 2 points. Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward joined the procession. Those groups responded to the same influence which was important in rallying the motor shares.

Sustaining Hope.

The bulk of the trade news suggests that hope rather than fact is at the basis of any bullishness on business and market prospects. Expectation of an increase in freight rates, of a revival of building construction to follow the new housing bill, of the stimulus to activity to be supplied by greater Government spending and the coming of spring when trade in general expands, nourishes optimism.

Trade news of the day included the report of the motor industry for January and of General Motors specically, the past week's credit changes and more results of business operation in the last quarter of 1937. January motor output fell 36 per cent from December and 44 per cent under the same month of a year ago. General Motors reported a drop on domestic sales to dealers plus overseas shipments of only about 10 per cent from a year ago was 40 per cent. Sales to consumers in this country in January was about a third lower than in the corresponding month of last year.

The statement of member banks of the Federal Reserve System covering leading cities showed a further drop in commercial loans, in spite of the $50,000,000 United States Steel loan, and a heavy fall in security loans. Industrial corporation profits for fourth quarter, compiled from the reports of 57 corporations, fell 34 per cent under the same quarter of 1936, but the first 134 corporations to report for the full year turned in a 14.6 per cent gain in profits over the previous year.

Crop Control.

While Congress is preparing to rush through the crop control measure with as little debate as possible —for it won't stand the light of publicity—well wishers of the agricultural interests of the country as well as of our commodity markets are looking at the matter with genuine alarm. Each political scheme for giving farmers a bonus and lifting the price of their products is turning out to work worse than its predecessor and to be more expensive in the bargain. The Wallace bill now up for consideration is by all odds the worst, as it gives unlimited authority (or will do so in practice) over crops to a politician, and puts an unlimited liability upon the Treasury, i. e., consumers and taxpayers. Were the control measure to stop at that point it might be accepted in the hope that, after a year or two of bad experience, involving an expenditure of only a billion or so, it might be repealed and a fresh start made. Unfortunately the measure not only threatens to cost a great deal without any permanent improvement in market prices, but it will go far toward completing the destruction of this country's foreign markets for farm products, particularly cotton. That damage once done cannot be undone.

Banking Position.

The condition statement of member banks in important cities disclosed that in the week ended February 2 banks outside of New York bought $16,000,000 of the $27,000,000 of Government securities disposed of by New York institutions. Government guaranteed obligations held by the banks increased $2,000,000 and other securities rose $25,000,000, virtually the entire changes in these holdings occurring in New York bank portfolios. Loans continued rapidly to shrink. Commercial loans were down $1,000,000 despite the $50,000,000 United States Steel Corporation borrowing which caused the New York banks to report a slight increase in their advances to business. Loans to brokers and dealers went down $44,000,000 and small decreases were revealed in other loan classifications. Demand deposits adjusted were off $119,000,000, but other deposit liabilities were little changed. Reserves fell $61,000,000.

Underwriting.

As frequently commented upon in this column, the problem of permitting the commercial banks to re-enter the securities underwriting business, but with restrictions on distribution of new issues, is becoming more pressing as the fundamental weakness of the present setup is revealed. Insufficient capital in the underwriting field results in more violent declines in prices in cases of failure of new issues, in greater haste toward distribution once a security is underwritten, and with greater delay in preparation for the marketing of securities.

California Gold Sets Record for 75 Years

San Francisco, Feb. 8.—Breaking a record of 75 years' standing, California last year produced $40,700,000 worth of gold. Not since 1861 have the mines of the State yielded gold of so great a value, and not since 1862, excepting 1883, has the total number of fine ounces produced (1,164,000) been exceeded, according to the Wells Fargo Bank today. Other metals also exceeded past records, and almost in all cases last year showed an increase, with the exception of zinc, and practically all materials of the structural group registered increased production and value, excepting cement and miscellaneous stone.

White House Business Talks Called Futile

Heavy Deficit Spending Is Inevitable, Declares Standard Statistics.

New York, Feb. 8.—Business men who, as recently as a few weeks ago, had been confident that out of the Washington conferences would come a mutual understanding which would permit co-operative action by buisness and the Government to end the depression, are now realizing that any such program is impossible, says the Standard Statistics Co. today. Rather than abandon the broad objectives which it has set for itself, the Government must inevitably seek to promote business recovery through the unsound medium of another program of large scale deficit spending.

Taking a strictly objective viewpoint of the impasse which has been reached at Washington, it is evident that a further period of uncertainty lies ahead. Congress is entirely unlikely to enact restrictive legislation, but neither Congress nor the Administration can immediately provide the spark to rekindle the fires of industry. Development of a new spending program necessarily will be slow.

Too Much Expected.

Too much, apparently, had been expected of the conferences at Washington between representatives of "big" and "little" business on the one hand and Government officials on the other. Business interests primarily desire an easing of the broad Government attack on private initiattive, and it is obviously impossible for them to formulate any cohesive program of specific measures for recovery beyond this general request.

Government policies are necessarily dictated as much by political factors as by economic influences. It is difficult, therefore, for the Government to offer to relinquish any major part of its program of "policing" business, when to do so would involve an important loss of political support.

979 Closed Banks Now Liquidated

J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of of the Currency, announced yesterday the completion of the liquidation of 21 receiverships during January, 1938. This makes a total of 979 receiverships finally closed or restored to solvency since the banking holiday of March, 1933.

Total disbursements, including offsets allowed, to depositors and other creditors of these 979 receiverships, exclusive of the 42 restored to solvency, aggregated $367,440,359, or an average return of 79.9 per cent of total liabilities, while unsecured creditors received dividends amounting to an average of 65.97 per cent of their claims.

Dividends distributed to creditors of all active receiverships during the month of January, 1938, amounted to $1,579,075. Total dividends paid and distribution to depositors of all receiverships from March 16, 1933, to January 31, 1938, amounted to $895,055,623.

Atlantic Refining Co. Drills 279 Oil Wells

Philadelphia, Feb. 8.—During 1937 the Atlantic Refining Co. drilled a total of 279 oil-producing wells in the United States, as contrasted with a total of 155 producing wells drilled by the company in 1936, an increase of 80 per cent.

In addition, 104 producing wells in which the company has an interest were drilled by others in the United States during the past year. The company is now producing 21 per cent more crude oil than at the end of 1936.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 8.—Political uncertainties and the increase in January unemployment had a depressing effect in the stock market today. Industrials were marked down, with steel, rayon, tobacco and liquor shares in supply while the silk-edged group held steady. Trans-Atlantic securities rallied from their low levels of the morning and domestic rails were reactionary. Oil and mining issues remained quiet together with rubbers.

Paris.—Banking securities were in better demand as higher levels and industrials closed generally firm. Rentes finished with gains of 10 to 105 centimes and Bank of France issue was up 65 francs. Suez Canal added 360 francs to its previous closing price and Royal Dutch 95.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures closed unchanged to ¼d. lower, the market reacted on a larger Indian crop estimate and forecast of showers in the American Northwest belt. Cotton futures lost 2 to 4 points under small Bombay selling and scattered realising with demand poor. Conditions in the Manchester textile industry are poor.

Farm Bill Gag Lifts Cotton $1

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—Prospects for quick action by the House on the farm bill today stimulated a late general buying movement in cotton to carry prices up about $1.00 a bale, best level since September. May rallied from 8.54 to 8.79 and closed at 8.75, with final prices 13 to 15 points net higher.

The market opened 5 to 6 points lower in sympathy with easier cables and under scattering liquidation. Prices slowly advanced, however, on trade and commission house buying until, in the last hour, a sharp upturn occurred on passage by the House of the "gag" rule limiting debate on the farm measure to four hours.

Steel Output Seen Halved For This Year

Demand Put at 26 Million Tons; 1937 Production 50 Million.

New York, Feb. 8.—The present outlook is that the annual output of steel in 1938 will be considerably smaller than the quantity produced in 1937, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. There is evidence that the normal amount of funds available for the purchase of steel this year will be much smaller than last year's normal, which was well below the actual amount spent. This evidence is provided by the prospective reduction in the national income and by an indicated decrease in the proportion of the national income available for the purchase of steel as the result of the disturbing effect of a depression on ecenomic equilibrium.

The prospective curtailment in the amount of funds normally allocated to the buying of steel indicates that, on the basis of the present level of steel prices, the normal demand for steel will amount to only 26,062,000 tons in 1938, as compared with a normal demand of 36,396,000 tons in 1937 and an actual output of 49,508,000 tons in 1937.

It is hardly probable that the actual demand will exceed normal in 1938 or that production will exceed the normal figure. In fact, the tendency will be for the actual demand to fall below normal as a corrective to the very large excess in 1937, which, to make matters worse, was superimposed on excesses in both 1936 and 1935.

There is one mitigating factor in this unfavorable outlook, however, and that is the probability that steel prices will be reduced. If prices are reduced, it will raise the normal demand in 1938 above the currently estimated figure.

Chevy Chase—Here is a really delightful, rambling Cape Cod house with all the quaint charm of its antecedents and the joy of carefree, modern living. It enjoys a fine view over the gently rolling surrounding country yet is close enough to neighbors to be anything but isolated. There are 3 bedrooms and 2 baths on the second floor; a library with lavatory, a beautifully decorated living room and dining room, a step-saving, U-shaped kitchen and a breakfast alcove on the first floor. In addition to a sunny Southern living porch there is a covered kitchen porch. A two-car attached garage and a planting layout supervised by an expert complete a most likable house and a very full value. Call DIst. 6830; Evenings, WIs. 2501.

Bob Burns Says—

I guess you've already found out that campaign speeches don't mean very much. The only way to get things done your way is to elect the people who want the same things you do.

Not long ago, when they was havin' rains and floods down home, some of the citizens went over to another community and asked the local preacher if he'd come over to our section and pray for the rains to let up.

The local preacher says, "Well, why don't you git your own preacher to pray for dry weather?"

The citizens says, "Well, we would but our preacher is just crazy about canoeing."

North Ireland Asks Voters to Spurn de Valera

By the Associated Press.

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Feb. 8. Prime Minister Lord Craigavon issued an election eve manifesto today calling upon voters of Northern Ireland to repulse "the impudent challenge" of Eamon de Valera for fusion with Ireland.

The fusion issue, raised anew in recent London talks between de Valera, Prime Minister of Ireland, and British government officials, was used by Lord Craigavon as a vehicle for calling the election tomorrow in which he demands a vote of confidence on his opposition stand.

Four of the five parties in the field were against union with Ireland. Only the Nationalist Party favored uniting Catholic-controlled Ireland and the six Protestant-ruled counties of Northern Ireland.

Beneath this issue are numerous domestic questions on which all anti-government parties hope to end the 17-year rule of Lord Craigavon and his party. The Independent Union Party charged the fusion question was only a sham.

Northern Ireland's population of about 1,500,000 is two-thirds Protestant and one-third Roman Catholic. Of 270,000 persons who qualify for insurable employment, official unemployment figures show some 100,000 are unemployed.

Political observers say those figures indicate the extent of the election battle. The Catholic minority, however, has never been able to gain a one-third representation in the government. The unemployed minority has exerted pressure on all parties.

Issues Ultimatum to Ulster

Versailles, France, Feb. 8 (AP).—Thomas H. Carter, secretary to the Duke of Windsor, issued the following statement today in response to a question by the Associated Press regarding French reports of the prospective birth of a child to the duke and duchess:

"This rumor was denied some time ago. There is nothing further to add."

Dr. Garr Cleared In Honor Slaying Of Gen. Denhardt

Dr. E. S. Garr, Mrs. Taylor's brother, was freed on a murder charge.

Denhardt, soldier-politician, was slain here last September 20 by Roy Garr, another brother of the comely widow, on the eve of Denhardt's second murder trial for murdering her. Roy Garr, pleading self-defense, was acquitted.

Union Officials Seized for Arson

Portland, Oreg., Feb. 8 (AP).—State Police Lieut. C. A. Warren today said two teamsters' union officials and two other men had been arrested on arson charges in connection with a $75,000 fire at the Salem Box Manufacturing Co. and the Copeland lumber yards at Salem, Oreg., last November 20.

Those arrested, Warren said, were A. N. Bankers, teamsters' union business agent in Marion, Polk and Linn counties; Clarence Adams, head of the teamsters, hiring hall here; "Red" Carson, jr., and John Newland, Portland teamsters. The companies are involved in a dispute with the A. F. of L.

British Rulers To Visit France Next Summer

Observers Hint Windsors Will be Absent at Time of Trip.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 8.—France will be the host to King George and Queen Elizabeth for four days this summer on the first state visit of the couple to a foreign country since their accession.

An announcement issued at Buckingham Palace said the King and Queen had accepted an invitation from President Lebrun to visit Paris from June 28 to July 1.

Plans for the trip were arranged carefully before the announcement was made and speculation arose immediately whether the King and Queen might be embarrassed because of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, who just have moved into a villa outside the French capital.

If the Windsors remain there, the royal visit will bring the brothers within easy access of each other for the first time since Edward's abdication. Well-informed quarters said it was highly probable that arrangements had been made in advance for the Windsors to be absent.

School Board Quits In Students' Strike

Seaford, Del., Feb. 8 (AP).—The Seaford Board of Education resigned today because of a strike of 200 high school students who had asked that the school board buy its power from the Seaford Light & Power Co., which the municipality hopes to control in five years, instead of the Eastern Shore Public Service Co.
